That Conclusion Is Drawn After the McElroy Conference in Washington.

FLAT FOR STATE LINE

GENERAL BROWN OBJECTS

Keeping Channel Open Should Not Fall on Government, He Says.

"A MINOR PROBLEM."

If the government can spend its millions to build a channel to keep the sandbars, mudbars and snags out of 400 miles of the Missouri River from Kansas City to its mouth, and then cannot take care of a 400-foot sandbar at the Kansas City wharfsite, then we should quit.—H. F. McElroy, speaking at the wharf conference in Washington.

WASHINGTON BUREAU
THE KANSAS CITY STAR
610 ALBEE BUILDING

(By The Star's Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The prospect for a settlement of the Kansas City wharf site controversy appeared somewhat brighter this afternoon following a 2-hour conference of H. F. McElroy, city manager; a Kansas City, Kansas, delegation and Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, chief of engineers. At the meeting also was represented the Inland Waterways Corporation, which will operate the Missouri River barge line and lease the proposed dock from Kansas City.

Judge McElroy asked the war department to issue a permit for a wharf on the Woodswether site at the state line "without any strings tied to it." General Brown, in turn, submitted a tentative permit in which the war department would specifically state it would not keep open the approach to the wharf, and oblige Kansas City to remove any obstructions which might be erected in the main channel.

An Objection by McElroy.

To these restrictions Judge McElroy strenuously objected. He was backed up by Representative Homer Hoch of Kansas, who said the Southwest was interested in getting cheaper transportation rates, and expressed the opinion it was the government's duty to provide an accessible channel. The Inland Waterways Corporation tacitly approved the city manager's demands. The Kansas City, Kansas, delegation interposed no objections to the arguments advanced by McElroy.

General Brown pointed out in the case of the sandbar in front of the Woodswether site, which he termed a "probability," that if the government agreed to keep open the approach to it that a demand would come from other cities to keep open their river harbors.

The city manager and the Kansas City, Kansas, delegation, headed by Charles Dooley and Logan Pittman, officials of the Missouri River Shippers' Association, first called on Secretary Good, who in turn referred them to General Brown. The secretary indicated he was ready to accept any agreement worked out between General Brown and Judge McElroy that was acceptable also to the Inland Waterways Corporation.

Brown Still Holds Out.

When the conference was recessed this afternoon, General Brown still was standing out for a wharf permit which removed all obligations from the government to keep open the harbor. McElroy was just as stubbornly contending that the city would not erect a river terminal where $1 had to be paid for switching charges, or to keep open an approach to the main river channel.

The new chief engineer asserted that, if the river traffic reached the volume at Kansas City that was expected, the river front would be lined with terminals, as now is the case at Pittsburgh, which has about ten river terminals.

Judge McElroy explained that the ½ million dollars in bonds voted for building the river terminal was "Kansas City's contribution to its trade territory." The Kansas City, Kansas, delegation showed its approbation when Judge McElroy said the docks would serve largely the people of Kansas, and that Kansas City desired a river terminal which would benefit all of the city's trade territory and not Kansas City alone.

The city manager expressed a belief the importance of the sandbar in front of the Woodswether site had been exaggerated greatly, and that for one-fifth the estimate made for its removal he would be willing to take a contract and predicted he would make a profit. He said also there had been too much interference in the controversy from outside parties, who were not named.

The conference was continuing late today.

(By the Associated Press.)

INDEPENDENCE, KAS., Oct. 3.—Pupils of a 13-room brick school building at Mound Valley, seventeen miles east of Independence, marched to safety late yesterday as the building was destroyed by fire of an undetermined origin. Fire departments from Parsons, Cherryvale and Altamont helped fight the flames.

A Welcome Goes Out to Sea to Meet MacDonald.

(By the Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—President Hoover and Secretary Stimson today sent messages by radio to Premier Ramsay MacDonald, aboard the S. S. Berengaria, welcoming him to this country.

The President's message said:

As you near the shores of the United States I send to you a most cordial welcome not only in my own name but on behalf of my fellow countrymen as well.

The message of Secretary Stimson read:

I send you my heartiest greetings on your approach to America. A sincere welcome and warmest hospitality await you.

BRITAIN TO HOLD PALESTINE.

Jews Will Be Supported There, Arthur Henderson Says.

BRIGHTON, ENGLAND, Oct. 3.—In a long review of his stewardship in foreign affairs, Arthur Henderson, secretary for foreign affairs, told the members of the Labor party in conference here that Great Britain has no intention of abandoning her mandate over Palestine, and proposes to continue to support Palestine as a national home for Jewry strictly in conformance with the Balfour declaration.

Mr. Henderson said the British government would bring those guilty of the recent massacres in the Holy Land to trial, regardless of their race and creed. In a reassuring statement to the Jews throughout the world, Mr. Henderson said the recently appointed commission would investigate thoroughly the Palestine outbreaks, but would not deal with the major question of policy.

Investigation of Woman's Death Planned by Department of Justice.

(By the Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The federal government was brought into the range of the capital's interest over the mysterious death of Mrs. Robert A. McPherson, jr., today with the disclosure that the department of justice was preparing to direct an investigation of its own.

This decision followed the indictment of Mrs. McPherson's youthful husband, a bank clerk, on a charge of strangling her with a pajama cord, after high police officers and a coroner's jury had declared her a suicide. Attorney General Mitchell, with other officials of his department, and Leo A. Rover, district attorney, who will have charge of the prosecution of McPherson, participated in the conference which decided upon the new investigation.

BRANCH BANKING UNDER FIRE

Association Probably Will Oppose Views of Controller Pole.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 3.—Although it is forecast that resolutions will be adopted by the American Bankers' Association in accordance with the branch banking views of J. W. Pole, controller of currency, it was evident today such resolutions would meet opposition.

In outlining what he termed a fundamental weakness in the banking system of the nation, Pole contended national banks should have branch banking privileges. Advocates of such expansion on the part of national banks allege that state banks, and banks operating under trust company charters, enjoy a privilege which should be shared with the national organizations.

Proponents of the unit system of banks contend, however, such privileges would give the national banks an unfair advantage over state chartered institutions.

A Ditch Digger Finds $10,000, but It Is All Counterfeit.

(By the Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—The end of the rainbow was located yesterday at East Eighty-fourth street and Prairie avenue by Joe Dowery, who digs ditches. The pot of gold was there all right, just like the book says, only it was all in $1 bills, 10,000 of them. Mr. Dowery immediately resigned as a ditch digger.

The 10,000 $1 bills were in a tin box that Joe's shovel uncovered. He took them to the federal building, for the bills were old and he wanted new ones of larger denominations.

A little later he was back at the end of the rainbow asking Matt Smith for his job. "The money," he said sadly, plunging the blade of his shovel viciously into the innocent soil, "was counterfeit."

JUNE CAREY'S CASE PASSED.

The preliminary hearing of June Carey, charged in three counts with first degree murder in connection with the fatal blast at Sixty-ninth street and Prospect avenue, was continued today by Frank Benanti, justice of the peace, until 10 o'clock Saturday. The hearing was scheduled for today.

The continuance was at the request of Ralph S. Latshaw, jr., counsel for Carey. James R. Page, county prosecutor, who was in Justice Benanti's courtroom, offered no objection.

HARGETT ANSWERS DUTY

Bishop Waldorf Says Several Doors of Opportunity Were Open for Minister Who Goes to Tulsa.

Bishop E. L. Waldorf of the Methodist Episcopal church said today the matter of Dr. I. M. Hargett's transfer to Tulsa in exchange for Dr. Charles Drake Skinner of that city had been "under consideration."

The bishop, speaking with The Star over the long distance telephone from Downer's Grove, Ill., where he is attending the Rock River conference of the Methodist church, said he had received no word from Grand Avenue Temple, where the exchange of ministers was approved last night by the quarterly conference of the church.

SEVERAL OPPORTUNITIES OPEN.

Bishop Waldorf said he had not caused the matter of Dr. Hargett's exchange with Dr. Skinner to be taken before the quarterly conference except in so far as "several doors of opportunity seemed to be open at the time, as is usual in the Methodist church following our conferences."

"These several doors of opportunity were open for the ministers to pass through to larger service," Bishop Waldorf said. "I informed the brethren at Grand Avenue Temple of these open doors to opportunity."

Dr. Hargett issued this statement: "I have had a grand time in Kansas City. There are few greater pulpits in the country than at Grand Avenue Temple here at the crossroads of the world.

CHURCH HAS BEEN CROWDED.

"For six years the people of this city have crowded my church. No church could have treated its pastor more loyally than I have been treated here. My people have surrounded me with their love, confidence and support. My life has taken deep root among them. It will be hard to tear myself away.

"For six years I have put on a high pressure program with splendid results, having taken in 1,350 new members.

"I feel it is best for me to accept this opportunity to go to our great church in Tulsa, said by Bishop Waldorf to be the finest church building in Methodism.

"Dr. Charles Drake Skinner, who is to be my successor, is an outstanding man in our church. He built a great church in Buffalo just before going to Tulsa. In his six years there he has built one of the finest Gothic cathedrals in the Southwest. Dr. Skinner is an excellent preacher, a splendid organizer and an unusual executive. I bespeak for him the good will of Kansas City."

IN TULSA SIX YEARS.

Dr. Skinner has been pastor of the First Methodist church in Tulsa six years. He declined to comment today in Tulsa on the call to Grand Avenue Temple in Kansas City except to say the matter had been under consideration about one week.

Following his graduation from Syracuse university with a degree of doctor of divinity in 1910, Dr. Skinner filled a pastorate at Auburn, N. Y., and later served as president of the Cazenovia Seminary in New York. Following his pastorate of the Linwood church in Buffalo, Dr. Skinner was transferred to Tulsa.

Dr. Skinner led in revision and enlargement of plans for the $900,000 First Methodist church building at Eleventh street and Boulder avenue, Tulsa, which was dedicated last December. Dr. Skinner is one of the best known men in Methodism, according to conference officers, serving in four church conferences, and at one time was a member of the general conference.

Tulsa knows Dr. Skinner as a scholarly type of minister, a conservative man whose pastorship has been marked by a steady, studious progress. His congregation in Tulsa comprised many very wealthy persons.

WALDORF CONFIRMS THE SHIFT.

Dr. Hargett Receives Telegram and Best Wishes of Bishop.

Confirmation of the transfer of Dr. I. M. Hargett from Grand Avenue Temple to the First Methodist church at Tulsa was received today by Dr. Hargett in the following telegram from Bishop E. L. Waldorf, who is attending conference at Downer's Grove, Ill.:

Inasmuch as the churches involved, through their regularly constituted committees, have given their approval, and inasmuch as the pastors involved also have approved, I herewith am transferring you to the Oklahoma conference and appointing you pastor of the First Methodist church at Tulsa. The appointment will be effective November 1. Heartiest congratulations. Best wishes.

SHE'S A MODEST ISHBEL

EVEN FACE POWDER IS SCORNED BY MISS MACDONALD.

She Hopes to See a Ball Game in America, Although She's Not Much of an Outdoor Girl—Not a Teetotaler.

(By the Associated Press.)

S. S. BERENGARIA, Oct. 3.—Miss Ishbel MacDonald, 26-year-old daughter of Britain's Scottish prime minister, uses no make-up. She does not even powder her nose.

In a conversation with correspondents today she commented she never used cosmetics, preferring the natural complexion given her by years in the Scottish highlands.

"Make-up?" she answered a question. "No, I don't even powder my nose, although I sometimes have been urged to do so."

WOULD SEE A BALL GAME.

She told the correspondents she wished she could see a baseball game while in America, but she is not sure it will be arranged. She said she often had wondered about the game, and wished she could see it played—that is, played as it should be.

Baseball led to a discussion of other things typically American.

"I'm sure," she said, "I'll find myself at home in America. Indeed I'm already so much at home I'm lapsing into the American language."

NOT FAIR TO JUDGE GIRLS YET.

"What do I think of the American girl?

"Well, I've not seen very much of her, you know. It is not fair to judge any country by its travelers."

Then she talked about herself, remarking she would like to dispel some illusions which seemed to have been held about her.

"I'm not fond of knitting and I am not a housekeeper," she said, adding she had been greatly misrepresented in her domestic leanings. On the contrary, she said, her ambitions run to social work, and so that she may have scope for that she hopes to keep on as a member of the London County council, corresponding to an American aldermanic council.

WON'T RUN FOR PARLIAMENT.

"But I've no idea of standing for parliament," she added, "unless I find some ends necessary to serve which could be brought about better by so doing."

She is particularly anxious to watch the working of the juvenile courts in New York City.

"I'm not a teetotaler," she remarked, "but I don't drink and I don't smoke. I'm not particularly fond of outdoor sports or dancing. You probably have been misled by what you have seen of me on this steamer. I've walked miles on this voyage, but at home, except at holidays, I walk comparatively little.

"Yes, I do play golf, but you'll have to guess my proper handicap for I've never turned in a card. Some of my drives into the net on the upper deck probably were deceptively good. This is just as in my music. My teacher used to say that if I played as well as I looked to be playing I would be playing very well indeed."

TO DOCK EARLY TOMORROW.

The Berengaria Still Holds Back to Arrive on Schedule.

(By the Associated Press.)

S. S. BERENGARIA, Oct. 3.—J. Ramsay MacDonald, British prime minister, will arrive off New York at dawn tomorrow, rested and keyed to what he hopes will be a visit in America far-reaching in its furtherance of Anglo-American amity.

The Berengaria, probably for the first time in its career, plowed the west Atlantic at a reduced speed today so as not to bring the giant Cunarder to quarantine too soon, a circumstance which would have complicated the reception arrangements.

The vessel is expected to reach quarantine about 6 a. m., permitting the distinguished passengers to board the city tug Macom soon after and proceed up the bay to the Battery, where they will be taken up Broadway to New York's city hall.

There will be only a brief stay in New York tomorrow, the premier and his party proceeding before noon to Washington, where he will confer with President Hoover on Anglo-American relations in general, and naval limitation and reduction in particular. After a few days in Washington they will be New York's guests for a longer stay, returning to England from Canada.

So far during the fiscal year the collections have been $3,422,965.93 for the three months since July 1, an increase of 1½ million dollars over the same period a year ago.

SHOUSE HITS FARM "CURE."

Method Used by Federal Board Is Attacked by Chairman.

(By the Associated Press.)

KINSLEY, KAS., Oct. 3.—Speaking informally before a Western Kansas audience at the dedication of Edwards County's new courthouse here today, Jouett Shouse, chairman of the Democratic party's executive committee, scored the method undertaken by the federal farm board to effect agricultural relief.

"If, as it appears, curtailing farm business and reducing the farmer's production is the best remedy the federal farm board has to offer, I believe that very soon there will be a great movement to enact legislation that will bring real relief and give the farmer equality with other industry," the famous Kinsley resident, who arrived this morning from Washington, asserted.

"The farmers will demand such a movement and, when they do, no political lines will stand in its way," he added.

Mr. Shouse compared conditions in Edwards County now and when it was organized fifty-five years ago.

"It is apparent," he said, "that the farmer has not prospered along with the merchant. He needs thought and help from the government to obtain relief from the unjust conditions he faces."

PLAN A "MESSIAH" VISIT

TWO CONCERTS HERE IN DECEMBER ARE BEING CONSIDERED.

Afternoon and Night Programs in Convention Hall Are Discussed for the Lindsborg Chorus of 550 Voices.

Plans are in the making for two concerts December 14 and 15 in Convention hall by the Messiah chorus of Lindsborg, Kas., under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce.

The projected visit of the famous choir of 550 voices to Kansas City at this time is the natural outcome of a gift of $75,000 from the Presser Foundation of Philadelphia for the new Conservatory of Music building at Lindsborg. It is the first help of this kind that the Presser Foundation has given any institution west of the Mississippi. For two years the Presser Foundation directors have been considering the case of Bethany college at Lindsborg and its remarkable but unhoused Conservatory of Music.

LINDSBORG DID ALL IT COULD.

The board was aware that Lindsborg had done the utmost it could do when it built its new auditorium last year, following upon the heels of the large endowment it had previously obtained for its college.

The new auditorium is so constructed that the new conservatory building will complete the architectural whole. The conservatory will cost more than $75,000. In fact, the Presser gift depends upon Bethany college, assisted by its friends in the Southwest, obtaining $40,000.

Hence the Kansas City concerts. The chorus desires to visit Kansas City. The proceeds will go to help make up the needed $40,000.

Yesterday Dr. Ernst Pihlblad, president of Bethany college and of the Messiah Choral Society, visited Kansas City to discuss with Conrad Mann, William M. Symon and other members of the Chamber of Commerce committee the plan for the two concerts. Dr. Victor Spong of Kansas City, chairman of the directors of Bethany college, accompanied Dr. Pihlblad.

ADMITTANCE WILL NOT BE HIGH.

Prices for the two concerts will be low enough to bring the concerts within the reach of all. The plan of bringing the chorus to Kansas City for these concerts will go before the Chamber of Commerce committee Monday. It undoubtedly will be approved.

According to the arrangements discussed, "The Messiah" will be sung twice in Convention hall—Saturday night, December 14, and Sunday afternoon, December 15. Handel's great oratorio never has been sung more impressively nor more brilliantly than it is sung by the Lindsborg chorus under the direction of Dr. Hagbard Brase, who has devoted years to perfecting singers under his leadership. The choir is acknowledged to be one of the finest in the world. The chorus is more than forty years old.

It shows that inquiries as to Kansas City artiales have been received from every country in the world and every state in the union. The inquiries have been increasing in the last six months, moreover. Exports from here exceeded 5 million dollars in value last year.

SEE A DIMMICK MOTIVE.

Wife May Have Been Slain to Collect on Insurance.

(By the Associated Press.)

ST. JOSEPH, MO., Oct. 3.—Police here said they believed C. D. Dimmick, 27-year-old state highway department draughtsman, arraigned today on charges alleging the first degree murder of his wife, slew the woman in an attempt to collect her life insurance.

Dimmick is said to have confessed killing his wife, also 27 years old, by beating her with a stone and then driving his car over an embankment in an attempt to fake a motor car accident.

The slaying, according to the alleged confession, took place on a lonely road twelve miles north of St. Joseph yesterday. Then, with the couple's infant asleep in the car, it was wrecked.

In the purported confession Dimmick, who is a World War veteran, said a quarrel over his mother preceded the slaying. Today police said they had learned Mrs. Dimmick had $1,000 life insurance when she was married and that she made him her beneficiary. Recently, it is said, she increased her insurance to $4,000 at his persuasion.

Dimmick was arraigned in Savannah, Mo., today on a first degree murder charge and held without bond.

MOURN A PEACE DISCIPLE

DR. STRESEMANN'S DEATH STIRS REGRET ALL OVER EUROPE.

British Statesmen Agree the German Foreign Minister Was a Great Influence for International Amity.

(By the Associated Press.)

LONDON, Oct. 3.—London political circles today received with deep regret word of the death of Dr. Gustav Stresemann, German foreign minister. The reich's "strong man," as he was called, was familiar to most politicians here as the most powerful exponent of Germany's recent foreign policy, that of conciliating her former enemies rather than resisting them.

Arthur Henderson, foreign minister in the new Labor British government, said his death was "a loss not only to his own people but to the peoples of Europe and the world."

"He was a true hero of peace. His name will live in history as one of the greatest architects of European solidarity and good will as long as men remember the deeds of our day and generation," he added.

Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer, was deeply moved.

"I had the highest admiration of his character and ability," he said.

David Lloyd George,, ex-premier, said:

"His death is a disaster for the peace of Europe. He was a great conciliator and I am sorry, very sorry, to hear the news. He rendered an immortal service to the cause of European and world peace."

Messages of sympathy with the German government in the loss sustained by the death of Dr. Stresemann were sent by Foreign Secretary Henderson and the British government today. Mr. Henderson also sent a personal message of condolence to Frau Stresemann.

A SHOCK TO COUNTRYMEN.

(By the Associated Press.)

BERLIN, Sept. 3.—News of Dr. Stresemann's death crept slowly throughout the German capital today. Everywhere it came as a great shock. Flags were lowered to half mast, and the city took an appearance of mourning, for Dr. Stresemann commanded nation-wide respect, even from his bitterest political enemies.

The reichstag session at 10 o'clock was made a special mourning observance for his death.

Dr. Stresemann died at 5:25 a. m. today of a heart attack which followed a paralytic stroke at 10 o'clock last night. He was 51 years old and had been in ill health many months. Frau Stresemann and his two sons were at his bedside.

For several days recently he was confined to his bed with his old catarrhal trouble, but he got up yesterday to participate in the reichstag debate on issuance of industrial insurance, a political issue which threatened collapse of the coalition government which he personally held together.

His physicians believed the strain of bitter debate in the reichstag during the day weakened his system. In the last few months his most vigorous fights in the reichstag nearly always had ended in a recurrence of his illness.

Dr. Stresemann was regarded as the backbone of the German cabinet, headed by Dr. Mueller, and many did not see how the coalition could hold together without him.

Political circles considered whether his death would mark a material change in Germany's foreign policy, which since his ascendancy has been one of co-operation with the League of Nations and reconciliation with Germany's old enemies, with honorable meeting of the country's Versailles treaty obligations its cornerstone.

His death came, too, at an awkward moment in the reich's affairs, when ratification of the Young reparations plan seemed certain to muster considerable opposition. It remains to be seen whether the loss of Dr. Stresemann as leader of the move for ratification will alter the status of the reparations arrangements worked out arduously at Paris and The Hague.

THE LEAGUE SEES A LOSS.

Geneva Officials Agree Stresemann Was a Mighty Worker for Peace.

(By the Associated Press.)

GENEVA, Oct. 3.—Foreign Minister Stresemann's death has caused deep sorrow at Geneva, where he was recognized as one of the greatest figures in the cause of international conciliation and world peace.

"It is a terrible loss," said an official of the League of Nations. "It is hard to see how anyone can take his place. It was Dr. Stresemann who was chiefly responsible for bringing Germany into the league. He was his country's leader at the memorable agreement at Locarno. He has been Germany's member on the league council. Always has he been a mighty worker for peace. He was always a courageous fighter for the interests of Germany, but was always a supporter of conciliatory methods. His death is a terrible loss to the league and to Europe."

"Pea Ridge" Day, the Arkansas strawberry grower, who can yell even better than he can pitch—and that is mighty good yelling—was the magnet that drew Kansas City's baseball fans to Muehlebach Field today despite threatening skies. Then there was another attraction. Manager Billy Southworth of the Rochester Red Wings had chosen his no-hit right-hander, Tex Carleton, to try to prevent the Blues getting the second game as they did the first.

Both ticket buyers and reserved seat holders began filling the field somewhat earlier today than in the opening game of the junior world series, probably cognizant of that early opening hour—2 o'clock—which caused many to miss the first inning yesterday.

There were about 8,000 persons in the grandstand when the game started. Estimates of observers were that the total would be slightly lower than yesterday's 9,704.

The fact both pitchers today were right-handers meant the lineups were virtually the same as yesterday, when Tom Sheehan's cunning was matched against that of the skillful Herman Bell.

The Red Wings were not at all convinced by yesterday's 4 to 3 defeat. While they admitted Joe Kuhel's tenth inning double to left was more or less in the nature of a fluke, they agreed it was just one of the fortunes of baseball war.

"We may get one of those hits today," they said, and they started out as if they meant to do just that.

The pitchers could work with less caution today than the pioneering Sheehan and Bell did yesterday. The hurlers the first game were not acquainted with the batting peculiarities of the opposing batsmen, and Sheehan and Bell found those out for Day and Carleton, the result being a game that continued two hours and forty-three minutes.

The Blues worked out first again today, Fette throwing the ball in their batting practice. Then the Red Wings took the field, and their peculiar caps excited as much comment as they did yesterday.

The spirit and enthusiasm today were greater than at the opener. The personal element had entered on the side of the Red Wings. The fans had begun to learn the Rochester players' names and were commenting, as the game started, on the abilities and batting averages of Southworth, Watkins and Worthington.

DETAIL OF THE GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Rochester—Felix worked the count to three and two and then singled cleanly to center. He was then caught off first by Peters, who made a snap throw to Kuhel. Spurgeon took Toporcer's slow roller and threw him out. Soulworth was thrown out by Spurgeon. One hit.

Kansas City—Tooprcer took Knothe's grounder and threw him out. Spurgeon sent a sharp single to center. Kuhel was nicked on the leg by a pitched ball and trotted to first. Worthington came in fast for Tucker's short high fly. Watkins went into left-center for Grigsby's fly. One hit, two left on.

REDUCES FIVE DETECTIVES.

Miles's Demotions Include Wyatt and Frederick.

The expected "shake-up" in police headquarters under the new chief, John L. Miles, which came today, dwindled somewhat in magnitude. Five men were demoted, instead of the twelve expected.

The detectives reduced to the rank of class B patrolmen are Alex Stewart, Harley Wyatt, Charles Frederick, O. H. Nichols and Joe L. Dill. Frederick was criticized when he served on the arson squad for having withheld information concerning Dade M. Carey, which, police said, would have been helpful in solving the Gillis theater explosion case.

Five men will go to the detective department for probation service. They will rank as class B patrolmen temporarily.

They are E. E. Buchanan, clerk; A. J. Burkhart, Arthur Scahill, Dixie Moore and R. M. Fagan.

F. A. Murray, Negro patrolman, recently transferred to the detective department, was returned to the patrolmen's division again. L. W. Foster will be transferred in his place.

THE NEW STYLES? BAH!

A YOUNG BUSINESS WOMAN SAYS THE CHANGE IS UNWELCOME.

Those Supposed to Have Insisted on Different Fashions Had Nothing to Say About What Will Be Worn.

To The Star: From New York comes the assurance by The Star's fashion editor that "the women have won"—won, we are to understand, in the effort to have a completely new type of dress.

I am one of the women who somehow cannot feel victorious over the change, and I believe there are hundreds of thousands — perhaps even several million—who agree with me. And none of us, who are supposed to have "insisted" on a change which is sure to be little short of miniature tragedy for a lot of us, had a chance to make a single chirp in protest.

AND THIS AIR OF MYSTERY.

The fashion editor tells us blithely that, after we are put into waistline dresses, with flowing, flaring skirts, corsets, furbelows and earrings, we will win back the air of mystery which long ago earned the magic title of "enchantress."

I could not help but pause and grin at this point in her article to picture the expression on the boss's face—I am a young business woman—if he should look up some morning to see me slinking into the office wearing one of the atrocities being copied from Paris so prolifically—a tiered and ruffled skirt swathed about me and trailing almost to the floor on one side, an alluring, mammoth ribbon bow on the opposite hip, a pinched-in waistline and a lacy collar draped about neck and shoulders.

ENCHANT HIM WITH EARRINGS.

Of course, if he was rude enough to bark out something about how I expected to get about town and do my work in that thing, I merely would tinkle the earrings bewitchingly and enchant him into padding the paycheck at the end of the week. As the English have it, I don't think!

Perhaps the fashion editor would argue with me that even if the boss doesn't care for a staff of enchantresses in his office, working havoc among the masculine employees, he will be charmed to have them floating about in his social world at home. Maybe so, but when his wife's shopping bills at the end of the month come in swollen twice their normal size (and they will be, for she must discard every left-over dress in the wardrobe and pay for twice the material and twice the sewing in the new ones), he'll sing a different solo.

THE OTHERS GROAN, TOO.

Girls in offices and factories are not the only ones groaning over the change that is going to knock the bottoms out of our pocketbooks and make us uncomfortable to boot. My friends who are married and busy with their children, their clubs and their parties resent having to take so much time and money to get clothes most of them think are ugly at best. And the older women—well, I heard one say she would be the last in town to get into a waistline dress, because she knew it would add ten years to her age.

I suppose the actresses and the models and the flappers going to their first parties and some of the society women will like these new dresses. They have the leisure and the grace to wear them. Maybe they'll be able to make these funny hats look like something besides glorified bonnets with drooping rabbit ears trailing at their sides.

WILL WEAR THEM ANYWAY.

I expect to be a fright in them, but I'll probably wear them, along with the corsets and the ruffles. I'm no crusader and I don't want to look different from everybody else.

It's bad enough to have styles we don't like, and when the stores will not offer us anything else we do "have to," don't we? But it's a final straw to be told we have "given the laugh to manufacturers" in insisting on having that completely new dress.

No wonder they are willing to sit in the background and admit with pretended discomfiture that "the women have got the better of them." They'll be jingling the money they get from our millions of little salaries—and from the men's, too—pretty soon, and they can afford not to be triumphant.

LEGION ELECTS A HEAD

O. L. BODENHAMER OF ARKANSAS IS THE NEW COMMANDER.

The El Dorado Man Gets the Place Without a Roll Call, the First in History of the Body.

(By the Associated Press.)

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 3.—O. L. Bodenhamer of El Dorado, Ark., was elected national commander of the American Legion here today.

The election was made unanimous on motion of Albert L. Cox of Raleigh, N. C., who had been regarded as the only other contender for the commandership. When nominations were started Alabama yielded to North Carolina and Cox placed Bodenhamer in nomination and asked his election be made unanimous. It was done in a burst of applause.

Bodenhamer is the first man in the history of the legion ever to be elected without a roll call.

The delegates staged a demonstration which resembled that of a national political convention. State banners were carried to the stage after Bodenhamer's nomination, and he was also carried to the platform on the shoulders of Arkansas delegates.

The legion then elected five national vice-commanders. They were Morton M. David of Denver, Col., Willis M. Brewer of Pontiac, Mich., Milton D. Campbell of Cincinnati, Frank Schoble of Philadelphia, and Jerry Dugan of Wilmington, Del.

ROSE TO A MAJOR IN ARMY.

(By the Associated Press.)

LOUISVILLE, KY., Oct. 3.—A school teacher who enlisted in the World War as a private and was discharged as a major is the story of O. L. Bodenhamer of El Dorado, Ark., who was elected national commander of the American Legion here today.

Mr. Bodenhamer is 39 years old and is not married.

As a member of the legion's national executive committee, the new commander has long been active in legion work, especially its rehabilitation, legislative and child welfare schedules. He is a past commander of the Arkansas department and was chairman of the national legislative committee in 1924-25.

A native of Goldthwaite, Tex., Commander Bodenhamer was educated at Howard Payne college and Baylor university. After receiving his degree he became a professor of English and dean of San Marcos college, acting as coach of athletics on the side.

LEGION REUNION TOMORROW.

One Thousand Out-of-Town Members Are Expected.

A thousand members of the American Legion from out of town are expected here tomorrow by Dick Richardson, chairman of the reunion committee which has planned a program of entertainment for the visitors.

Many of them will arrive in an 8-coach special Missouri Pacific train from St. Louis at 3 o'clock. This train will carry legionnaires returning from the national convention at Louisville. Others are expected on regular trains.

The visitors will be entertained at a barbecue and smoker at the Eagles' hall, 1108 Central street, followed by a line party at the legion prize fight at Convention hall, beginning about 8:30 o'clock. Some of the visitors will stay over Saturday for the Little World Series baseball game at Muehlebach Field.

Wives and mothers of the visitors will be entertained by the Legion auxiliary at the Hotel President.

It is hoped, Mr. Richardson said, to make the reunion particularly interesting for the men from the 2d, 42d, 89th and 35th divisions during the World War. Officers representing each division will speak at the smoker. A "good, snappy show" was forecast by the chairman.

He telegraphed the French ambassador at Berlin to present the condolences of the French government to the German republic. He also sent a telegram of personal sympathy to Frau Stresemann and called at the German embassy to express his deep sense of bereavement.

M. Briand and Dr. Stresemann were the closest friends and collaborators for years.

As early as Christmas, 1926, Dr. Stresemann foresaw the project of a United States of Europe, which since has been launched by Premier Briand.

Recently he wrote a correspondent who was collaborating with him on a sketch of his life, "What I have said about the United States can remain."

What he said was: "Americans can help the whole world.

"They are interested in the success of our ideas and ideals. We look to the United States because it is the most influential race and the most influential republic in the whole world. It is very necessary there should be co-operation between your country and the countries of Europe.

"And never, above all, get the impression that the Pan-European union, of which much is being said, will be directed in any way against the United States."

BISHOP MURRAY IS DEAD

APOPLECTIC STROKE FATAL TO PROTESTANT CHURCH HEAD.

(By the Associated Press.)

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 3.—Bishop John Gardner Murray, head of the Protestant Episcopal church in the United States, died late today, from a stroke of apoplexy at a meeting of the house of bishops.

The bishop died close to the altar of St. James church, where he presided at the business session of the house of bishops.

The bishop had presided at the meeting since Monday, and had not complained of illness. This morning, however, he expressed a desire to bring the sessions to an early close so that he might return to his home in Baltimore. Mrs. Murray was at her hotel a few blocks distant at the time.

A business career of eleven years, enforced upon him by circumstances in the midst of his preparation for the ministry, proved a blessing in disguise. for Bishop John Gardner Murray. Later in life when he became the presiding bishop of the Episcopal church in the United States that earlier training helped him to gain the distinction of being one of the outstanding religious executives and administrators of the country.

TRAINING NOT IMPORTANT.

The bishop, however, did not regard as the all important thing in religious work the necessity of business training for ministers. Asked if he thought all clergymen should have that training before entering the priesthood he replied: "It is not so important that clergymen should have business training as that business men should have some religious training."

As the presiding bishop and president of the National Council of the Episcopal Church in the United States, Bishop Murray occupied a position similar to that of the archbishop of Canterbury, ecclesiastical head of the Church of England. There is, however, this marked difference between the two offices: the archbishop of Canterbury is appointed by the British crown, while the presiding bishop of the American church is elected by the Episcopal general convention for a term of six years. Bishop Murray was the first presiding bishop thus elected.

Although he was one of the foremost spiritual leaders of the Episcopal church, Bishop Murray had achieved notable success in the financial and commercial world before he embarked upon what always had been his life's ambition—service in the church.

ORDAINED AT 35.

Bishop Murray was born at Lonaconing, Md., August 31, 1857. After completing his theological studies, the death of his father compelled him to postpone his entry into the ministry, the future bishop being obliged to enter business to help support his mother and three brothers and sisters. In eleven years and when he had reached the age of 35, he was in a position to satisfy his ambition and was ordained.

Assigned to missionary work in Alabama, the young clergyman spent four years in that difficult task when he was called to the Church of the Advent in Birmingham. Seven years later he became rector of the Church of St. Michael and All Angels at Baltimore, Md. He was elected bishop coadjutor in 1909 and two years later upon the death of Bishop Parot he became bishop of the Maryland diocese.

Bishop Murray's early business career took him for a period to Kansas, where he met Miss Clara Alice Hunsicker of Osage City, a member of a pioneer family of that state. They were married December 4, 1889, and five children were born to them.

The program at Tulsa will include an inspection of the recently constructed Skelly building there.

TAX PLEA TO NATIONAL BANKS

Donald Muir Urges Payment at the Old Rates.

TOPEKA BUREAU
THE KANSAS CITY STAR
(By a Member of The Star's Staff.)

TOPEKA, Oct. 3.—Donald Muir, chairman of the Kansas tax commission, sent a letter today to W. W. Bowman, secretary of the Kansas Bankers Association, urging the national banks to pay taxes at 60 to 65 per cent of the ad valorem assessment this year.

Since the federal courts held that the national banks could not be taxed at the general property rate, but must be taxed at the intangible property tax rate, there has been a sharp conflict between the national and state bankers relative to the taxes. At present the national bankers pay taxes at 50 cents on the $100, while the state bankers pay at approximately $3 on the $100 of value.

In his letter, Mr. Muir said:

> Because of the statements made by the national bankers, both in and out of their meetings, that they would be willing to pay a larger rate than they are now under the intangible law, and as it seemed to be the consensus that they should pay taxes on the basis of approximately 60 to 65 per cent of their assessed valuation, the commission has wondered if you would not be willing to make the suggestion to the national banks of the state that, when they pay their taxes, they pay an amount equal to 60 or 65 per cent of the tax they would pay if they were being assessed on the ad valorem basis. This, of course, would be up to the individual conscience of the banker paying, and it seems to us only fair to suggest this to them.
>
> In these times of high taxes, with real estate bearing an unjust share of the burden, and in view of the further fact that a bank is dependent upon its depositors for the money which it lends, it seems eminently fair to us that the national banks should take the broad and liberal view of this matter and voluntarily pay a larger share of taxes than they are now doing.

eports of Mismanagement Draw an Investigation by Governor Reed.

MAY BE ONLY WASTE

he Construction Work by Some State Institutions, However, Is Unsatisfactory.

TOPEKA BUREAU
THE KANSAS CITY STAR

(By a Member of The Star's Staff.)

TOPEKA, Oct. 3.—Has there been raft in some of the Kansas institutions, or just a waste of public oney?

Governor Clyde M. Reed, through eports received from the state busiess manager, Harry Rhodes, and rom Bert Barrier, budget director, nd from the state board of admintration, has instituted an investigaon of some of the state institutions. he trouble is not all from former dministrations. Reed's attention as called to it through evidences of ismanagement or bad faith on the art of some who are serving under s own administration.

Work Stopped at Norton.

The other day at Norton, where e state is building a tower 154 feet gh, a stranger stepped up to the uilders and watched their work for few moments with interest. Then surprised them by saying:

"Stop this work at once."

"Who are you?" asked the boss of e job.

"My name is Messenger, and I am ere on appointment from the govnor to inspect the work. Stop it."

The work was stopped because Mr. essenger charged the sand used in e construction was not of the qual- specified for the work.

That was an incident to denote at may have been going on in state nstruction for several years.

Governor Back of the Action.

"Telephone the governor," suggested essenger.

When the governor received the g distance call inquiring about essenger he said:

"If Mr. Messenger says for you to p the work, stop it. He has all the thority in the world to see that the rk is done in the proper way."

Messenger is a Democrat. He is a mber of the legislature from Crawrd County and is a building conactor. Reed liked the way Messnger talked about state institutions ring the session of the legislature, d he asked Mr. Messenger if he uld "devote a little time to the blic service."

"Yes," replied Messenger, "but I am Democrat. You don't want me in ur organization."

"Go to work," the governor replied, want to know what is going on in e state building program."

"Bungled Job" at Beloit.

One of the things that prompted e employment of a building eneer for inspection was the report work done at the reformatory for rls at Beloit. Some new boilers ere placed. After the work was ne and accepted by the state, Bert arrier, budget director, was inspectg the Beloit institution to see how e state's money was being spent.

"That work looks to me like a bund job," Barrier said, "and I am just farmer. I wouldn't have that kind work done on my farm."

George R. Paulling, superintendent building and grounds at the state ricultural college, was sent to Beit to inspect the job.

Trouble at Fort Dodge.

Out at Fort Dodge, where the state me for soldiers is located, the uble started early. It cost Reed e member of the commission that e recently appointed—Clyde Wilson. Under the law contracts must be let y advertisement. About the first act f the new board appointed by Reed as to let a contract for a new heatg plant. The job was given to a ontractor without the formality of dvertising for bids. Governor Reed opped the Fort Dodge work when he eard of it, and had the contract ancelled. Wilson, the chairman of e board, took offense and resigned.

Perhaps Wilson did not know the ort Dodge institution was under instigation at the time. But the state as been going into the records of at institution for several years past. t is said many of the records have een removed or destroyed. Old conacts cannot be found.

No Suspicion of Graft.

So far as known there is no suspion of graft on the part of any state fficial, unless it develops later from e Fort Dodge institution. A state fficial close to Governor Reed toay said a mass of evidence from at institution had been turned over o attorneys for investigation to determine whether the state has any hance either for civil action to reover money or for criminal action ecause of what has happened.

Another state official said the state ad been overcharged for almost very contract that had been let, even n the matter of building silos at the tate institutions.

Little could be learned at the state ouse about the impending shake-up. ut it is certain that a far-reaching nd thorough investigation is in progess.

THEATRICAL MAGNATE TO TRIAL—OTHER FIGURES IN THE DAY'S NEWS.

A.P.

TROUBLES BESET THE PANTAGESES—These are dark days for the family of Alexander Pantages, the theater magnate. Mrs. Lois Pantages, shown seated here, after being injured in a motor car wreck, has been convicted in connection with the death of a Japanese gardener in Los Angeles. The husband is on trial now on statutory charges brought by a young movie actress. The photograph shows, left to right, Roday and Carmen Pantages, the children; Mrs. Pantages, and the theater owner.

PANTAGES TRIAL IS ON

Bulletin.

(By the Associated Press.)

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 3.—The jury in the trial of Alexander Pantages was taken under guard to the scene of the alleged attack today at the close of statements from the prosecution and defense prior to the taking of testimony.

(By the Associated Press.)

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 3.—Hearing of evidence in the trial of Alexander Pantages, theatrical magnate accused of a statutory offense against 17-year-old Eunice Pringle, a dancer, began before Superior Judge Charles Fricke today.

Immediately following the convening of court, Judge Fricke began reading brief instructions to the jury on the determination of evidence.

District Attorney Buron Fitts announced Mrs. Lou Pringle, the girl's mother, would take the stand.

The second witness for the state, Fitts said, would be Miss Pringle. The state's plan after that point was not disclosed.

Pantages entered the courtroom shortly afterward.

Miss Pringle was dressed in a blue suit with a white collar, wearing a hat to match. She appeared very nervous, but apparently had recovered from a collapse at her home this morning.

When Judge Fricke completed his instructions, Defense Attorney W. I. Gilbert made a motion that the jury be taken at once to the scene of the alleged attack, the theater building which Pantages once owned.

District Attorney Fitts and his chief deputy prosecutor, Robert P. Stewart, protested loudly, contending the jury first should be permitted to hear a summing up of the state's allegations. The court sustained the prosecution and Fitts proceeded with his opening statement.

THREAT TO GOVERNOR MOODY

A Letter Warns Executive to "Keep Your Nose Out of Borger."

(By the Associated Press.)

AUSTIN, TEX., Oct. 3.—Governor Moody was threatened with death unless he kept his "nose out of business at Borger" in an anonymous letter postmarked in New York, which the Austin police department received today. It came special delivery by air and was addressed to Chief of Police R. D. Thorpe.

English "footmen" of the seventeenth century were chosen for their running ability, and it was a favorite sport for masters to bet their hired help against others.

TO PRESS BENNETT CASE

PROSECUTOR, IN REFUSING BOND PLEA, CALLS IT MURDER.

Lawyer for Wife Who Slew Husband Denies Knowing Whereabouts of the Charles Hofmans, Witnesses Who Disappeared.

"The Bennett case is first degree murder. Our investigation has shown nothing in the circumstances to call it anything except that."

James R. Page, county prosecutor, made that statement today to J. Francis O'Sullivan, attorney for Mrs. Myrtle Bennett, in refusing to recommend to the justice court that the young woman who shot her husband Sunday night after a bridge game quarrel be released on bail.

Mrs. Bennett has been in the county jail since the tragedy. She has been hysterical much of the time, but yesterday and today she appeared calmer. She has taken blame for the shooting ever since it occurred, after her husband slapped her several times in an acrid argument over the card game. Today she followed mentally the course taken by her husband's body on its way to Carmi, Ill., for burial, noting the time it would reach St. Louis and on to the destination.

In refusing to recommend bail for Mrs. Bennett today Mr. Page complained to her lawyer that the state has been unable to get in touch with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hofman, who were guests of the Bennetts in their apartment, 902 Ward parkway, the night of the shooting. Continued reports that they are "not at home" have delayed the investigation, he said. O'Sullivan said he did not know their whereabouts. However, the prosecutor is expecting them to make themselves available tomorrow.

O'Sullivan previously has said he would take the petition for release on bail directly to the justice court if Mr. Page declined to recommend it. Today, however, he said he was undecided what move would be made next. A hearing in justice court would require the presence of witnesses to testify that something in the circumstances would justify a reduction of the charge to second degree murder or manslaughter.

According to the prosecutor, Mrs. Bennett and her companion prisoner at the jail, Mrs. Evelyn Helms, also accused of murdering her husband, both will have to face jury trials.

BOY JUMPS INTO WINDOW.

Billy Crawford Is Cut Badly on Way to School.

Billy Crawford, 9-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Crawford, 1604 Jarboe street, suffered lacerations of his legs and hands today when he jumped through a window while playing at 812 West Seventeenth street.

The boy had started to the Webster school, where he is in the third grade, with a cousin, Kenneth Crawford, 13 years old. The two stopped at a vacant house, 812 West Seventeenth street, and were jumping from a second story window of the house to the second story window of another vacant house. On the second jump the younger boy missed and went through the first floor window below.

He was taken to the General hospital, where his condition is said not to be dangerous.

Three-Day Gathering Will Be for Study, With Sessions at the Lakeside Hospital and Kansas City Club.

Nationally known leaders in the field of osteopathic surgery began arriving here today for the annual meeting of the American College of Osteopathic Surgeons, which will be held today, tomorrow and Saturday.

Morning clinical sessions are to be held at Lakeside Hospital, 2801 Flora avenue. Business and scientific meetings will be held in the afternoons and nights at the Kansas City Club, with the exception of Saturday, which will be devoted entirely to clinical operations at the hospital.

National officers of the organization will be selected at a business session today.

Seventy-five surgeons had registered this morning. More than one hundred are expected by tomorrow.

Dr. Harry Collins, Chicago, president.

Dr. W. Curtis Brigham, Los Angeles, vice-president.

Dr. Orel F. Martin, Boston, secretary.

Dr. Edward C. Drew, professor of surgery, Philadelphia College of Osteopathy.

Dr. J. P. Schwartz, chief surgeon Des Moines General hospital.

Dr. George Laughlin, surgeon-in-chief for the Laughlin and A. S. O. hospitals at Kirksville.

Dr. George Conley, chief surgeon at Lakeside hospital here.

Dr. E. C. Drew, Philadelphia.

Dr. H. C. Wallace, Southwest sanitorium, Wichita.

Dr. Albert Cullen Johnson, Roscoe clinic, Cleveland.

The men named are scheduled for clinical operations and lectures. Bone surgery will be the subject for tomorrow's clinics.

The osteopaths will be entertained at a banquet at the Kansas City Club tomorrow night, at which degrees will be conferred on those entitled, either through research or unusual surgery, to fellowships in the college.

HIGH buildings are not confined exclusively to the larger cities. This is shown, says the American City (New York), in a survey recently completed by the Thompson-Starrett Company, covering 173 cities of the United States having a population of 50,000 or more. Of these, thirty-six have one or more buildings over twenty stories high.

On the other hand, forty-two cities have no buildings as high as ten stories, and fifty-nine cities have less than five such buildings.

"The survey reveals that there are in this country 4,778 buildings ten stories or more in height, and of these only 377 are more than twenty stories high. Approximately half of all buildings between ten and twenty stories and of those over twenty stories are located in New York.

"Carrying the analysis further, it is found that 50 per cent of the buildings in New York from ten to twenty stories and 60 per cent of those over twenty stories are located between Fourteenth and Fifty-ninth streets.

"New York has 188 buildings over twenty stories, Chicago has sixty-five and Philadelphia is third with twenty-two. Only six cities have 100 or more buildings over ten stories high.

"There are ten buildings in the country taller than 500 feet, and five others are in the course of construction. The highest is the Woolworth building, whose 792 feet has not been surpassed in sixteen years. This mantle of supremacy will pass this year to the Chrysler building, which will rise 809 feet above the sidewalk, but shortly thereafter the Bank of Manhattan building, mounting to a height of 836 feet, will claim the distinction of the loftiest building in the world."

KANSAS CITIANS IN CRASH.

No. 40 Car Accident Injures Mrs. C. L. Heilman and Mrs. U. S. Bittner

(By The Star's Own Service.)

LAWRENCE, KAS., Oct. 3.—Mrs. C. L. Heilman, 1206 West Thirty-ninth street, and Mrs. U. S. Bittner, 1328 Central street, Kansas City, are in a hospital here with injuries suffered in a motor car collision on U. S. highway No. 40, six miles west of here, today. Mrs. Heilman suffered an injury to her head. Mrs. Bittner's injuries were minor cuts and bruises.

Mr. and Mrs. Heilman and Mr. and Mrs. Bittner were driving to Enterprise, Kas., to visit relatives when their car collided with one driven by Mrs. L. Hodges of Junction City. Three persons in the Hodges's car suffered slight injuries.

Dryest September Except One.

LAWRENCE, KAS., Oct. 2.—Rainfall last month, amounting to 1.11 inches, was 3.10 inches below September normal, and was the smallest for the month, with one exception, in the sixty-two years' record. The exception was in September, 1908, when precipitation was .58 of an inch.

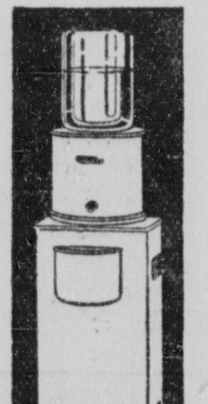
MODEL C-450 has an all porcelain interior—food storage capacity 45 cubic feet. Shelves adjustable to 2 in. spacing. Exterior of cabinet, 79¼ in. wide, 30 in. deep, 72 in. high.

GENERAL ELECTRIC COMMERCIAL REFRIGERATORS



The General Electric Bottle Water Cooler is operated by a 1/10 h. p. motor. Exceedingly efficient and compact. 17 in. square, 44 in. high. Automatic temperature control regulates degree of coldness of drinking water to suit user.

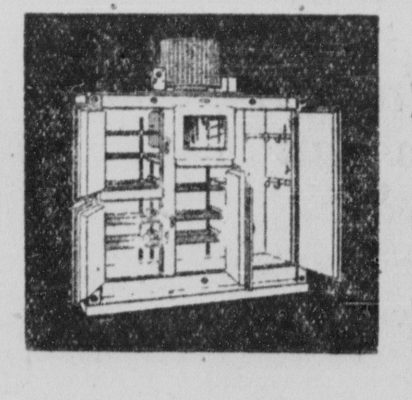
THIS announcement is of paramount importance to firms or individuals confronted with the problem of preserving perishable foods in large quantities. After years of research in its laboratories, General Electric has perfected a line of commercial refrigerators radically different and more efficient.

An entirely new type. Now, for the first time it is possible to buy as one complete unit a cabinet and refrigerating mechanism specifically designed for each other—working together for greatest efficiency at lowest operating cost.

These new refrigerators embody all the vital features of superiority found in the General Electric household models—of which more than 350,000 are in use today, and not one owner has spent a single dollar for service or repairs.

This is an unequalled record, made possible by the scientific design and the trouble-free operation of the mechanism.

Merchants and architects are invited to become acquainted with the various models of the new General Electric Commercial Refrigerator and their outstanding merits.



Model C-451 is similar to Model C-450 except that the right-hand portion of the cabinet is furnished with hooks instead of shelves and has a single full length door.

SEVEN VITAL POINTS OF SUPERIORITY

1 Easy to install—because the cabinet and the refrigerating mechanism are completely combined in one unit.

2 Greater storage capacity per square foot of floor area because all the mechanism is on top, out of the way, instead of taking up valuable space elsewhere.

3 Requires no attention. The mechanism is simple, quiet, hermetically sealed in a steel casing . trouble-free, dust-proof, self-defrosting, never needs to be oiled.

5 Completely sanitary and easy to clean.

DAYS TRIMMED TO HOURS BY THE DEVELOPMENT OF AIR MAIL

Seventeen-Day Trip of Seventy Years Ago Is Reduced to Seventeen Hours—And a Vision of Travel in 1999.

SEVENTY years ago today a stagecoach dashed madly to a general store in the little community of Los Angeles, Cal. Foam covered the sleek sides of the horses as they drew up and stood panting before the crowd which had gathered to see the arrival. Two or three passengers alighted from the rough-riding conveyance and the driver at once began tossing mail pouches to the ground.

"Seventeen days, six hours and ten minutes," was the grinning response.

A man in the crowd pulled a six-shooter from his belt and fired into the air. Others did likewise. Full-skirted women applauded and cheered as the men shot. The driver was lifted to the shoulders of a group of husky gold-seekers and borne to the nearest saloon.

"Set 'em up for this man," came the order.

A New Record Then.

And why not? Hadn't this begrimed and tired driver just finished the last relay which broke the existing record for mail from St. Louis to Los Angeles?

Think of it! Mail from the east side of Missouri to the west side of California in seventeen and one-quarter days. What speed!

That was seventy years ago. And just exactly that many years later the writer received a letter which was mailed yesterday in the balmy, salt air of the Pacific Coast.

The pilot who brought it on its last relay wasn't lifted to the shoulders of anyone. No one bought him a drink. No particular greeting awaited him as he walked to the air mail office and wrote out his flight report. Within a few minutes, he was in the family motor car, where his wife awaited him, and on his way home.

Seventy years ago it required more than seventeen days for the fast overland mail to reach Los Angeles from St. Louis. Today, air mail and westbound passengers do the same thing in seventeen hours.

A Vision of 70 Years Hence.

Now we cross the entire continent in forty-eight hours—fifteen days less than the time required for the early California settlers to receive their mail from Missouri seventy years ago.

At 9 o'clock the morning of October 3, 1999, a young husband in New York will have had this telephone conversation with friend wife:

"Mary, I've got to go to California on business."

"All right, dear. When will you be back?"

"Well, I have a golf date with Jonesie at 4 o'clock this afternoon and I'll probably get here about fifteen minutes before then."

INDICT WIFE FOR NEGLECT.

Improper Care of Sick Husband Brings Manslaughter Charge.

HAVERSTRAW, N. Y., Oct. 3.—An extraordinary indictment, which charges a wife with manslaughter in the second degree on the ground that her neglect of her sick husband caused his death has been returned by a Rockland County grand jury. This outgrowth of a case of inhumanity which stirred the placid little township of Stony Point became known today when the woman, Mrs. Daisy Miller, was arraigned by Mortimer B. Patterson, county judge. The trial is set for November 11.

Dr. John Sengstacken, county health officer, said he found John Miller, a paralytic, lying in an improperly screened garage without attention of any sort, apparently for days. The health officer said Miller's horrible condition was "due to lack of affection and responsibility on the part of his wife."

Neighbors told the board that Mrs. Miller had confined her husband in the cellar until their protests caused her to remove him to the garage. The invalid was given immediate attention by the authorities but he died three days later.

Will the President Make Washington Dry?

A personal test by President Hoover of the enforceability of the Prohibition law is what some keen observers see in his announced determination to make the nation's Capital a model dry city for the rest of the country. "If prohibition is enforceable in any of our urban communities, the city of Washington should furnish the proof," declares the New York Herald-Tribune, and concludes its editorial with this sentence: "It will be an exceedingly interesting laboratory experiment since, if it is demonstrated that an unpopular law can not be enforced in a community that lacks the franchise and even by Mr. Hoover, then the case for enforcement in other cities falls as flat as a pancake." And, on the other hand, as the Atlanta Constitution remarks, "If the President succeeds in the District of Columbia, then general enforcement will be made easier throughout the country."

Public opinion everywhere on this experiment is reflected in "The Digest" this week. Read the leading article and these striking news-features:

A LAND OF HOCUS-POCUS

IN HOLLYWOOD, ONE GETS FARTHER IF MYSTERIOUS.

Anything to Make the Movie Magnates Who Pay the Salaries Think You're Up to Something Will Do.

By Mollie Merrick.

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 3.—They fare best in movieland who invest their inspiration with an air of mystery.

Although to motion picture producers inspiration begins at 9 in the morning—when dialogue writers and scenarists are clocked as they enter the studio gates—and closes at 5, 5:30 or whatever hour the conference ends, and although 1,500 words a day are expected of these writers, those impress the simple souls of movie executives most who invest their 1,500 words with a vast amount of hocus-pocus.

There was Monte Katterjohn, who rode about town in the back seat of his limousine pounding at a portable. Who knows just what he pounded out? But the fact remains that he created the atmosphere of inspiration so vivid that, once started on its cycle, nothing but death could stop it.

Dorothy Farnum writes her adaptations and originals while a varlet of some sort changes records on a talking machine hidden in the farthest corner of her study. As she dictates to her stenographer her hand reaches out now and again to a series of little phials lined up on the table beside her divan. Did I mention that she lies prone while writing?

Each one of the phials releases an odor which in turn releases something inside Miss Farnum's soul. That something, in turn, is released in celluloid.

Dark, sudden as a tropic night, falls on the boulevard by 5. There is a sudden vitality on the part of shoppers. A zip and a zest the town has not known since the first wilting day turned the townsfolk mahogany color and slackened the tempo of gelatineland considerably.

Said one exile: "Did you ever notice a snowfall high up against the skyscrapers when it wasn't snowing down on the street at all? Man, that's divine!"

And another: "Give me Washington Square in the blue dusk of early evening, with a light snow falling and all the street lamps blurred to great golden spangles. The avenue curving off through the arch and the leafless trees etched sharply!"

And again: "I like that golden pattern of blocks—the lighted windows as you come out of the park with a good-looking girl after a nice taxi ride. If I only have $5 in my pocket that pattern of lighted squares makes me feel like a king——"

SPEED TRAPS BOY THIEVES.

(By The Star's Own Service.)

Chicago, Oct. 3.—Driving a motor car they had stolen at an Omaha tourist camp, two Los Angeles youths, who gave their names as Edgar Cox, 19, and Paul O'Connal, 18, both of Los Angeles, were arrested here today for speeding.

Cox and O'Connal confessed that they had committed more than 100 robberies on a trip from the Pacific coast. They were driving an expensive coupe bearing California license plates.

The youths displayed clippings from Denver, Omaha, Kansas City and Sioux City newspapers which told of their exploits. The police believe Cox and O'Connal are members of prominent Los Angeles families.

A "WHY?" TO THE POLICE

PUBLIC SERVICE INSTITUTE ASKS EXPLANATION OF RECORDS.

With Everything in Readiness Three Months Ago to Remedy System, Department Clings to Archaic Form.

The Public Service Institute is trying to find out why, three months after the forms were ready and tabulating machines were installed, the new system of police records recommended by August Vollmer, police expert, has not been put in operation.

That there is a clash of authority somewhere in the police department is evident. There are indications, too, that the delay in utilizing the improved system is traceable to that.

CONDEMNED BY VOLLMER.

Meanwhile the Kansas City police department continues to use an archaic system that was condemned by Chief Vollmer, has been discarded by most cities, and under which police experts say there cannot be efficient police work.

When Chief Vollmer was brought here by the Chamber of Commerce for the police survey, he put his finger on the matter of records as the weakest spot in the organization. He considered and recommended the installation of the standard system as one of the most important moves the department could make. His recommendation was adopted by the police board.

Lieut. Walter Sherlock, superintendent of the bureau of records, was sent to Los Angeles for a 30-day study of the standard system and an observation of its practical operation. He returned with the blank forms in use there, altered them to meet conditions in Kansas City, and after a delay of six weeks, caused by someone in the department, they were printed.

READY IN EVERY WAY.

The adoption of the forms makes necessary the use of tabulating machines. While the forms were in preparation a woman employee was trained in the operation of the machines. Everything is in readiness and has been for weeks. Yet no move has been made to utilize the new system.

Under the standard system it would be a simple matter for the chief or any other executive to note at a glance what was going on at any hour of the day or night in any part of the city, in any police district or on the beat of any patrolman. It would give a complete check of virtually every move of every man on the force. Besides, it would bring up to the minute the record of every person arrested or under suspicion. It would be available for instant comparison with the records of other cities, simplifying the identification of prisoners or suspects.

With all those facilities idle, the department apparently is content with the guessing system and detectives are being transferred to the police department and patrolmen are being transferred to the detective department in an effort to check crime.

RUMORS BLAME SECRETARY.

It is said, although not by the Public Service Bureau, that Wallace Cameron, secretary to Chief John Miles, is the stumbling block. Cameron is a long-time personal friend of the chief, and as such has assumed or has been given unusual authority in police matters.

It is said that Mr. Cameron, a secretary, does not consider Sherlock, who prepared them, competent to handle the new records, hence they are not put into use. The Public Service Bureau personnel, long in close touch with police affairs, looks upon Mr. Sherlock as exceptionally competent in his line.

A Blended Anthracite

This select anthracite and smokeless coal scientifically blended combines the best qualities of both coals and provides an ideal fuel for Furnaces, Hot Water Plants, Arcolas, Heatrolas, Baseburners and Stoves.

Housewives prefer it because:

1. It is clean! Smokeless—Odorless—Dustless—Sootless.
2. It is economical. It outlasts soft coal nearly two to one and will hold fire on checked draft for 24 hours.
3. It is exceedingly easy to use. No lumps to break up. Reduces the task of housekeeping.

SPEAKING THE PUBLIC MIND

Favors a Downtown Plaza.

To The Star: With all Kansas City's wonderful growth, its business district lacks an essential thing—a parkway. As a former resident I always have been interested in Kansas City, and now the announced business development program seems especially attractive. The residential portions have been beautified in a way that has brought out the spontaneous praise of visitors, and more than ever the city is ranked among the finest anywhere.

There is a lack, however, that is very essential to present business success and the future welfare of a city that is destined to receive still greater acclaim. As the support of the beautiful residential sections is based upon the substantial background, in beauty and facility, of the business district, the latter's needs must be grasped now before the chance slips forever.

Kansas City can well be proud of its splendid business blocks, but its workers and its visitors lack the open space so necessary for rest to those whose hours are spent in carrying on the detail of commerce and for those transients who need something besides stone and steel to impress them with the greatness of a city. The relief to the eye and the mind of the green furnished by a parkway and the respite of a few minutes' rest on a bench in the open strengthen and refresh one as nothing else can do. Even to the passer-by it provides a momentary sense of relief that is refreshing and therefore valuable.

The great cities of the world are famous for their city parkings, and many of our own cities of far less importance than Kansas City provide them. What I suggest could be accomplished now, but the opportunity never again will present itself: Create a plaza from Thirteenth street to Seventeenth street and from Grand avenue to McGee street, after first building a combined city hall and county courthouse on the square bounded by Twelfth, Thirteenth, Grand and McGee.

This ultimately would bring more enobling results than twice the number of blocks of business buildings. It would do more. It would affect for good the entire business district, particularly causing it to spread west, east and south, and utilizing substantially and economically a commercial area long neglected.

One essential I would add: Build no more buildings than those at Twelfth street, giving over the entire park space to grass and trees and benches, with here and there a small fountain. Large monuments and large fountains are neither restful nor picturesque, and they are very costly. Simplicity is what is needed—the ordinary green of the outside, that rests and take one's mind from the sordid and the commercial, and turns it to an appreciation of the beautiful and the spiritual, without which there is no real growth.

CHARLES R. JOHNSON.

Lobbyist Petitions for Public View.

To The Star: Your editorial in Monday's Star, "Let the Lobbyists Be Known," is to the point. Not only do lobbyists swarm Washington at every session of congress, but they infest the state capitals during sessions of the legislatures. The first amendment to the Constitution of the United States, article one, provides:

> Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

It is under this provision of the Constitution of the United States that the lobbyists and corruptionists exercise what they term their inalienable rights. While congress cannot deny the right to petition for the redress of grievances, it can by law provide a manner and method for the presentation of petitions. Corrupt lobbyists would disappear from the scenes in Washington and the state capitals if congress and the state legislatures would pass a law providing that all petitions should be in writing and filed with the proper officials not less than five days before presentation; and providing further such petitions should be open to the public.

Registration of legislative agents is only scratching the surface. A written petition would, in effect, be registered, and it would further disclose the purposes of the petitioners. The registration bill merely provides that the lobbyist will make himself known—the robber makes himself known by the discharging of firearms, but it can hardly be said that it cures the disease, or seriously affects the operator of the crime. "Pitiless publicity," in the writer's judgment, is the most certain cure for the evil complained of. A READER.

Questions About Municipal Efficiency.

To The Star: The Republican floor leader in the council declared the city administration efficient in an address Monday noon, and then it returns the compliment that night by voting for one filling station and referring permit applications for three more to the fire committee, which also has three more carried forward for consideration from the previous meeting.

Now just where is the efficiency of government in a practically unlimited filling station ordinance and an unwillingness to put proper limit and location ordinances into effect? Just where does the efficiency come in when the floor leader denounces, as was done recently, the violation of official oath in voting for the many stations contrary to the city ordinance? Wouldn't efficiency rather be in providing legislation that would protect our city, its boulevards, homes, churches, schools, hospitals and fine business buildings from what the city manager a few years ago termed "excesses?"

Wouldn't efficiency be in the direction of restoring the protective clauses of our previous sign ordinances, plus whatever the courts have permitted since, and eliminating the illegal features overriding our municipal art commission's charter authority to first pass on overhanging signs and canopies, authority now denied? Wouldn't efficiency be giving us municipal collection and disposition of trash, as in Cincinnati, and including the steam railways in the smoke nuisance ordinance, as in Chicago?

This has to do with facts, not politics; with causes, rather than parties; with fair and needed laws, rather than inadequate legislation and special privilege. Let's call efficiency by the right name.

JOSEPH MEINRATH.

Behind in Traffic Control.

To The Star: Traffic conditions in Kansas City are rather poor compared with other cities. I have been in many other cities, some large, others smaller, and believe Kansas City is behind in traffic control. Motor cars seem to have right of way over pedestrians. A traffic signal should be installed at Twenty-seventh street and Prospect avenue. Sundays, when people are going and coming from church, you either stand and wait until the procession passes, or dodge in and out with your life at stake. Some cities have safety zones built of wood where people can safely stand. Let's hope Kansas City will make improvements in traffic regulations.

Booze an Ancient Word.

From the Spokane Spokesman-Review.

"Why," asks a petulant wet, "do you always use the vulgar word booze when speaking of alcoholic beverages?" Not always, bibulous brother, and etymologically the word is not vulgar. It has a long, long ancestry, running back through medieval English to the German, and back of that to oriental origin. An old Persian-Arabic, word, buza, denoted an alcoholic beverage made from grain. In Sheridan's "School for Scandal," written 150 years ago, you may find the line, "While good Sir Peter boozes with the squire," and where will you find better exemplar of good English than that? No, the word is ancient and respectable. We wish we could say as much for the liquids that it denotes and the traffic in them.

The battered ships of the famous Magellan expedition returned to Spain loaded almost to the gunwale with precious spices, the greatest prize of the first trip around the world.

Clean Kidneys By Drinking Lots of Water

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers or Back Hurts.

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, constipation, torpid liver, irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders.

TRACE WASHINGTON LINE

(By the Associated Press.)

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 3.—An unusual genealogical document, apparently tracing the family of George Washington back to the year 1180, was under examination here today after having been rescued from an assortment of old clothes collected by a welfare organization.

The document includes pictures of Sulgrave manor house, and the Sulgrave church, in Sulgrave village in England, in which the ancestors of the first President of the United States lived. The first name contained is William De Hertburn, receiver of the grant of the Manor of Wessyngton, County Durham, England.

LISTS AN UNBROKEN LINE.

Descendants of De Hertburn are listed as De Wessyngtons, and then Washington, from whom the line is unbroken, thus:

1. John Washington of Lancaster County.
2. Robert Washington of Lancaster County.
3. John Washington of Lancaster County.
4. Lawrence Washington of Sulgrave Manor, which had been the property of St. Andres monastery before its dissolution.
5. Robert Washington.
6. Laurence Washington of Sulgrave and Brington.
7. Laurence Washington, rector of Purleigh, Essex County.
8. John Washington, who migrated to Virginia in 1657.
9. Laurence Washington, brother of John.
10. Augustine, a son of John, who married Mary Ball, father and mother of 11. George Washington, the first President of the United States.

THREE GENERATIONS THERE.

It appeared from the document that at least three generations of Washingtons lived at Sulgrave, and it was in 1538 that Laurence Washington purchased from King Henry VIII the land which constitutes the Washington Manor.

The document carries the Washing coat of arms. In it was found an inscription believed to be a copy of an epitaph on a gravestone of the President's ancestors.

It reads:

Here lyeth ye bodies of Laurence Washington, gent., and Anne, his wyf, by whome he had 4 sons and 7 daughts. Laurence died ye 15th day, and Anne, deceased ye 7th day of October, AN. DM. 1564. (The numbers were in Roman numerals.)

The document apparently was preserved by the Stanton family, which parallels the branch of the De Hertburn family, of which George Washington was a descendant.

THE WILD ROSE IN THE LEAD.

Nearly a Million Favor It as the National Flower.

WASHINGTON BUREAU
THE KANSAS CITY STAR
610 ALBEE BUILDING

(By a Member of The Star's Staff.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The wild rose remains the favorite in the contest to name the national flower being conducted by the American Nature Association. The votes number nearly a million. The wild rose has a lead of about 200,000 over the columbine, the only real opponent of the rose in the race. The supporters of the columbine, however, it is understood, are making a determined rush in several western states to overhaul the leader. The balloting will end December 1.

A Veteran Katy Conductor Dies.

FACE TO FACE REALISM

Model 902

TO experience the real marvel of "Face-to-Face Realism" of the new Sparton EQUASONNE instruments you must sit before them and actually FEEL this amazing new quality. To describe it is like trying to put into words the "something" that distinguishes the art of the master musician. It is in FEELING . . . not in sound alone. Every light and shadow of personality that the artist puts into music comes to you. We invite you to call.

Since the question has come up, we desire to explain candidly why you should buy your Sparton radio from an authorized Sparton dealer.

There are factory guaranteed Spartons and, unfortunately, the other kind. The factory guaranteed Spartons are sold only by authorized Sparton dealers. The names of those dealers in Greater Kansas City are listed below. Each one is a trained Sparton Radiotician. You take no chance whatever in buying of them. They sell only first class Spartons. They are trained to service Sparton Radios properly. They stand behind every Sparton they sell. And the Sparks-Withington Company, manufacturers, and Gustin-Bacon Manufacturing Company, distributors, stand behind every authorized Sparton Dealer.

COVERT CLOTH IS WORN

CARDIGAN SUITS SPONSOR THIS FABRIC IN MANY COLORS.

The Wool Dress Has Diverting Jewelry Accessories in Tortoise Shell, Cat's Eye, and Amber Effects.

By browsing about among smart shops, and by keeping one's weather eye open at smart gatherings, it becomes evident that covert cloth has the smartest sort of sponsorship. One encounters it in so called coat dress types, in one and 2-piece frocks, in cardigan suits and even dresses which have a hint of elaboration. What is perhaps more interesting one meets with this smooth finished, slick looking cloth in a multitude of colors among which may be mentioned violet, greens and reds as well as the more familiar tans, grays and navys.

Dresses of this ilk are naturally chosen as an accompaniment to the short fur jacket, although velvet and tweed are almost equally popular for this purpose. There is something very rich about the combination of smooth covert cloth with both fur and velvet as many women have been quick to recognize.

The smart cloth dress is usually offset by good looking costume jewelry in harmonius color. There are interesting cat's eye, tortoise shell, amber and carnelian effects as well as enamel and matrix pieces set alone or with metal or wood. Wooden chokers and longer necklaces have fashionable sponsors, but naturally such jewelry as is mentioned belongs only to street and sports costumes, the preference for evening and late afternoon being for precious or semi-precious stones. Crystals with colored stones are accepted as in good taste for the most formal occasions which is a boon naturally to the woman whose jewel casket holds pieces that are effective rather than intrinsically valuable.

In the smartest ensembles being worn—and the ensemble is by all odds the smartest costume—one is struck by the frequency with which the trimming details are duplicated on both dress and coat. The stunning frock sketched is to be followed tomorrow by the coat which accompanies it, and on both one sees the diamond motif made with pintucks. Even before seeing the coat one suspects it will be short, and that it will follow the line of the frankly irregular skirt. Notice, by the way, that its unevenness assumes a new line, dipping as it does on either side. This is a line highly regarded in circles already jaded by the longer-in-back expression of the uneven theme.

Scalloped Haddock With Cheese.

Prepare one and a half pints cream sauce. Take two pounds haddock cut in thin slices about ¼-inch and 1-inch square. Butter shallow baking dish. Put some cream sauce in bottom, sprinkle with grated cheese, then put a layer of haddock. Season with salt and peper, chopped parsley and one tablespoon lemon juice. Repeat this, making three layers with sauce on top. Add grated cheese, minced parsley and paprika. Bake forty minutes in oven 350 degrees.

Steamed Salmon Mold.

2 cups freshly cooked or steamed salmon,
2-3 cup soft bread crumbs,
2 tablespoons chopped celery,
1 tablespoon chopped parsley,
1-3 teaspoon salt,
¼ teaspoon paprika,
½ cup milk,
3 eggs, well beaten.

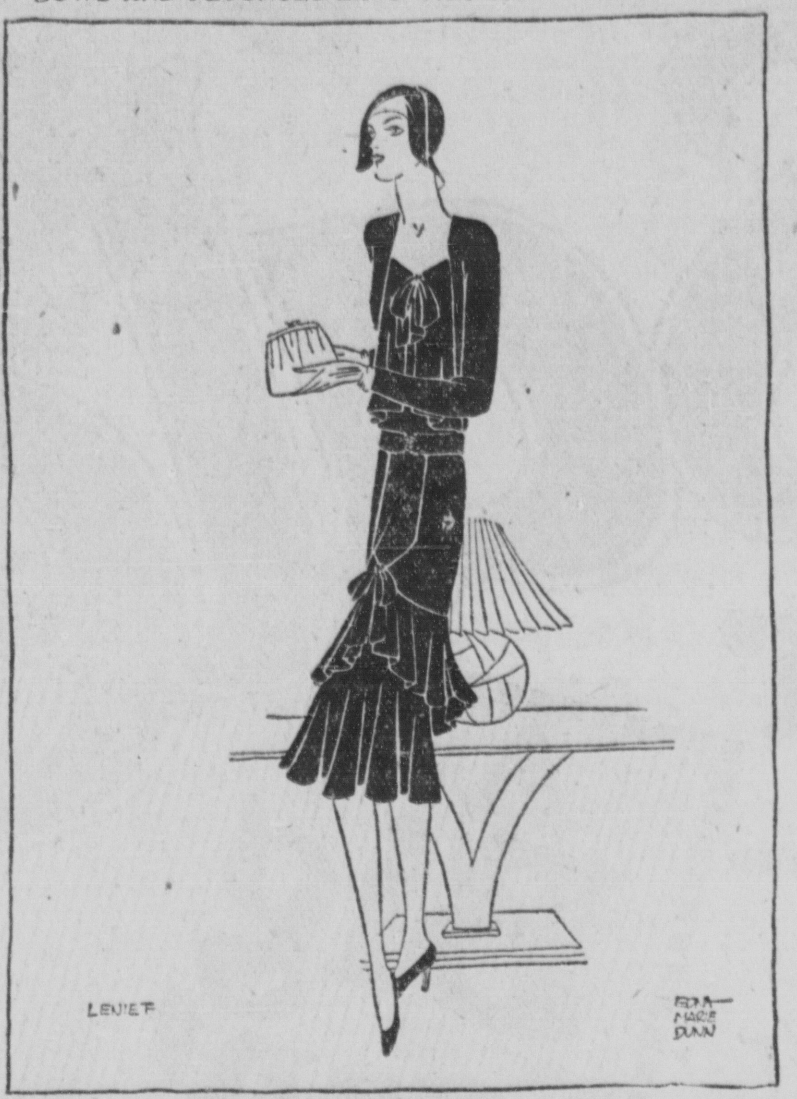
Mix the ingredients and pour into a steam mold. Cover tightly and steam for one hour. Unmold and surround with the creamed peas. Garnish with parsley and lemon quarters and serve at once.

Tuna Salad.

1 cup tuna,
2 hard cooked eggs, diced,
1 cup diced cucumbers,
2 tablespoons chopped pimentos,
½ teaspoon salt,
¼ teaspoon celery salt,
¼ cup chopped sweet pickles,
½ cup salad dressing.

Mix and chill the ingredients. Will serve six persons.

BOWS AND FLOUNCES LEND VARIETY TO THE MODE.



Lenief does smart and original things in the way of bows and flounces to this frock with its normal waistline, long skirt and low-placed fullness. The bow at the top of the top flounce accents the snug hipline.

Flashes of Fashion

That colorful tweeds register as the fall season gets under way. Callot, for instance, has made a stunning brilliant red tweed coat and skirt with a beige sweater trimmed at the neckline with beige, black and red grosgrain ribbon.

Tweeds were the dominant note in school wardrobes.

So-called "real" laces are slated for a revival because of the popularity of the velvet dress.

The princess and the belted silhouette continue to be the main point of difference in the fall mode.

Greeks and Romans Used Butter as a Cosmetic

The "ultra smart" among the Greeks and Romans as early as 450 B. C. used butter as a hair dressing and a cosmetic. The Hindoos offered it as the greatest and holiest of sacrifices in their worships. The Macedonians used butter as an ointment after bathing. In Spain as late as the seventeenth century butter fat was found in the medicine shops advocated for external use only. In rural districts of Germany today, fresh unsalted butter is much used as a cooling salve for burns.

Enlightened by advances in the field of nutrition, butter is used at the present time as one of the healthiest of the natural foods. Vitamin A, which is found so plentifully in butter, is not only important in bone-building, but is also important in cell-building, this makes butter such a necessary food for the growing child.

Since butter is one of the best food sources of vitamin A and since vitamin A is such an important food accessory, it is wise to use enough butter each day to be sure that your body gets a reserve of the important vitamin. In Sweden when a minimum of fifty-three grams or practically two ounces of butter a day was used, xeropthalmia—the disease of the eye which indicates a real deficiency of vitamin A—was unknown.

No definite daily amount of butter has been decided upon, but at least two ounces a day is advisable. The amount of vitamin A in the diet is not an amount which merely protects from the disease, but that which gives one health and vigor.

Today's Canning Suggestion.

OLIVE OIL PICKLES.

Cover 4 quarts of sliced cucumbers with boiling hot water and when cold, drain and cover with a weak brine. Let stand overnight. In the morning drain, then add:

½ teaspoon cloves,
½ teaspoon allspice,
½ teaspoon celery seed,
2 teaspoons cinnamon,
½ cup olive oil,
½ cup sugar,
½ cup mustard seed,
12 onions.

SHOE COMFORT COMES WITH PROPER FITTING

Now is the time of the year when children are being outfitted with shoes for the fall and winter months. Fitting of the shoes to the child means comfort and foot health, or trouble and distress through all his life. That is why it is so important to use the proper type of shoe and to be sure it is properly fitted.

A noted foot specialist has stated that the five essentials of fitting shoes are as follows:

Length—The shoe should extend at least half an inch beyond the toes.

Height of Toe—To avoid pinching on the top.

Height of Instep—Many shoes are too tight across the instep which prevents proper development of the arch of the foot and results in flat feet and fallen arches.

Gripping of the Heel—Which prevents rubbing and to give a firm leverage in walking.

There are types of shoes to fit every different type of foot. Any foot that is not normal should be under a doctor's care. Never let children wear shoes that have grown too short or too small. And never let him wear any shoe that has been worn by another child.

REQUESTS have been running the gamut from Mexican chili to wilted lettuce and back to candied citron and coffee cake. Suppose we begin with the coffee cake and gradually get warmer as we work our way back to the chili. Mrs. G. F. U., 1926 Norton avenue, Kansas City, wants recipes for coffee cake and whole wheat bread.

COFFEE CAKE (GERMAN).

1 cup scalded milk,
2 cakes compressed yeast,
Flour for a sponge,
¼ cup water,
1-3 cup melted butter,
¼ cup sugar,
½ teaspoon salt,
1 egg beaten,
Cinnamon,
Grating of lemon rind,
Flour.

Make a sponge with the milk, yeast softened in the water, and flour; when light add the other ingredients and flour to make a very stiff batter; beat thoroughly; when light again spread in a buttered dripping pan, cover and let rise. When ready for the oven, brush over with beaten egg and dust thickly with sugar and cinnamon mixed together. Bake in a hot oven.

WHOLE WHEAT BREAD.

Boil three medium sized sliced potatoes. Scald one pint milk and add three tablespoons lard or butter and three tablespoons sorghum or sugar. Mix gradually, while hot, with one pint white flour. Then add the potatoes, which have been mashed and put through a sieve, and the water in which the potatoes have been boiled. When this mixture is lukewarm, add one cake compressed yeast, dissolved in one-half cup warm water and one teaspoon sugar. The batter should be of a medium consistency. If necessary add a little more white flour. Beat and set aside to rise in a moderately warm place, free from drafts.

When light the batter will be full of bubbles, and it is then ready to mix with the whole wheat flour, about two quarts is used, sometimes a little more. Add the flour to one teaspoon salt. Do not make too stiff a dough. If the whole wheat flour is warmed slightly before adding to the dough it will rise more quickly. Grease the top of the dough, cover and set aside to rise to double its bulk, then it is ready to mold with the aid of a little fat, and put in bread pans. Let rise again to double its bulk and bake in a moderate oven about three-quarters of an hour. This recipe makes three loaves.

A number of requests have come for sweet green tomato pickle that is made with raisins. Glad to print this excellent relish recipe.

SWEET GREEN TOMATO PICKLE.

Slice thin and sprinkle with salt the desired amount of green tomatoes and let stand overnight. Then boil in water in which a small amount of alum (⅛ teaspoon) is put to make the pickle green and crisp. Drain off water and soak in cold water while making the syrup. To 5 pounds tomatoes allow 3 pounds sugar and enough vinegar to dissolve the sugar. Boil and skim, then add 1 teaspoon each of cinnamon and cloves and 2 pounds seeded raisins and the tomatoes. Cook until the raisins are plump and the tomatoes are a translucent green, like citron. Seal hot.

SPICED PEARS—FOR MRS. W. W. R.

5 pounds sugar,
1 cup water,
1 pint vinegar,
¾ cup stick cinnamon,
1-3 cup whole cloves.

Heat sugar, vinegar, water and spices to boiling. Scald, peel, halve and core the pears. Put in a stone crock. Pour over them the boiling liquid. Let stand. Repeat three mornings. On the fourth day seal in clean jars.

FRENCH FRIED POTATOES.

Wash, pare and cut potatoes in lengthwise strips ¼-inch thick and ¼-inch wide. Place in cold water white heating the fat to 395 degrees Fahrenheit. Dry the potatoes thoroughly between clean towels and fry, a few at a time, for about four and one-half minutes or until golden brown, crisp and well cooked.

J. M. of Kansas City, Mo., wants to know how to prepare wilted lettuce. Here is the very simple procedure:

WILTED LETTUCE.

Heat 1 cup vinegar boiling hot. Add to it 1 well beaten egg, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon mustard, few grains black pepper. Pour this over the lettuce while it is still scalding hot.

Mrs. A. D. P. of Stoutsville, Mo., is anxious for a "hot" Spanish sauce. Here is a peppery sauce that may be made still more peppery by the addition of small quantities of garlic, a few small red peppers and onions.

HOT TOMATO SAUCE.

2 cups tomato pulp,
2 tablespoons sugar,
1½ cups vinegar,
2 tablespoons flour,
1 teaspoon paprika,
1 tablespoon chili powder,
1 teaspoon cayenne pepper.

Mix the above ingredients together with the exception of the flour, and heat. Stir enough cold water into the flour to make a thin paste and then stir into the hot sauce and cook until thickened.

CANDIED CITRON.

Peel and cut in sections, removing all seeds; let stand over night in brine made of half a cup of salt to a gallon of water. Drain, rinse, and cool until tender in fresh water. Let cool in the water. Take sugar equal to the weight of the citron before cooking and a cup of water to each pound of sugar; let boil, and skim. In this syrup cook the citron until transparent; remove and let the syrup simmer until quite thick; put in the pieces of citron and let stand over night. Take out the citron, reheat the syrup, pour it over the citron, and let stand again. Repeat until the citron will take up no more syrup. Then let dry off and store.

To The Star: Will you please print the recipe for the real Mexican chile? Thanking you kindly. Mrs. L. H.
Kansas City, Mo.

CHILI.

Soak 1 cup of chili beans over night. Cook until tender. (A medium sized can of chili beans may be substituted; these require no cooking.) In a frying pan melt ½ cup suet or fat and add 1 slice onion if this flavor is desired. When fat is very hot add 1 pound lean beef, ground fine. Cook for five minutes. Then slice 2 large tomatoes and add. Cook until all ingredients are well done, then add beans and 1 tablespoon chili powder and salt and pepper to taste. Serve very hot.

Miss Elinor Smith is one of the youngest of the women pilots in the United States. At 8, she visited flying fields with her father. At 15, she was ready for her license. At 16, she received it. At 17, she captured the women's endurance record by staying in the air 26 hours 21 minutes and 32 seconds. It was broken recently by Maryse Bastie.

Now is the time to paint

Wood is thoroughly dried and seasoned by summer's sun. Balmy fall season is ideal painting weather. Full protection is wanted for winter, when it is needed most.

Use SWP
1 Costs 50% to 60% less per job than "cheaper" paint.
2 Gives best protection.
3 Lasts twice as long.
4 Produces most beautiful lasting color effects.

COVER THE EARTH
S-W Paint Products are sold the world over under this famous trade-mark.
Trade-mark Registered

GIVE your house an armor-like coating of SWP this fall. Then it will be fully prepared to withstand the most damaging season of the year. Winter and early spring are merciless to houses that are even slightly weather-beaten.

Fine old SWP is the world's best paint bargain. Its wonderful body thoroughly covers many more square feet per gallon. Its tough film lasts five years on the average, and its rich, true colors retain their beauty to the very last. Cheap paint must be replaced every year or so. That is why SWP saves 50% to 75% on repainting.

It is real economy to paint now. Do it before ruinous winter increases the cost. Near you is "Paint Headquarters"—your neighborhood Sherwin-Williams dealer. Ask for suggestions on smart, new color schemes. This service is gladly given without charge.

The Grandson of "Empire Builder" Is to Take Bride

The culmination of a romance which began at a university will occur in November when the wedding of Miss Dorothy Millett, St. Paul and Minneapolis, and Louis W. Hill, grandson of James J. Hill, Minnesota pioneer and founder of the Great Northern Railway, will take place. Miss Millett was a student at the University of Minnesota, says the St. Paul Dispatch, when she met Mr. Hill, and the romance continued through the summer at Glacier National Park. The betrothal was recently announced. Mr. Hill for several years has been working for the Great Northern, of which his father is president, learning the business from the ground up. Following his wedding and honeymoon, he will take a permanent position with the road.

RECENT announcement of the betrothal of Miss Dorothy Millett of St. Paul and Minneapolis and Louis W. Hill, jr., grandson of James J. Hill, widely known as the "empire builder" and founder of the Great Northern railroad, carries interest to the many who have read and heard so much of the Hills as connected with the railroad. And it seems quite fitting that Miss Millett is likewise a descendant of a pioneer, for her grandfather came to the Northwest in 1856, two years before the elder Hill.

Louis Hill is following the example set by his grandfather and father, who at present heads the Great Northern. He has been studying railroading, and the Great Northern in particular, from the inside. He has worked as a section hand, lived in boxcars and worked in shops and section shanties. He has been an assistant freight agent and a "car chaser" for the operating department.

KEPT OUT OF HOME.

A story is told of one occasion upon which he returned home unexpectedly to find his family away. He was clad as a section hand. A newly employed servant answered the door and refused to admit young Hill. He went to the back door, where he found a servant who recognized him and was admitted to his own home.

At another time he proved his courage during a forest fire in the West. He was a member of a crew which manned a relief train sent to a town menaced by forest fires. The crew notified all residents of the town to be ready to leave should the flames come close. The smoke was choking, but young Hill, with the rest of the crew, stuck to the task until all were notified. Fortunately a fresh breeze which sprang up diverted the blaze from the village, allowing the inhabitants to remain.

At present Mr. Hill is living at home and working in the Great Northern transportation department. For weeks he has spent his time from 7:30 o'clock in the morning until 5 o'clock or later in the afternoon trudging about the entire Twin City terminal system in company with another man from the department, making a study of special equipment and service problems.

MET IN UNIVERSITY.

Mr. Hill is 27 years old, and is a graduate of Yale and Oxford universities. He met Miss Millett last April at the University of Minnesota, where she was a student. The romance continued during the summer while Miss Millett was working as an attendant at a newsstand in a Glacier National Park hotel. Mr. Hill was working at Whitefish, Mont., for the Great Northern.

Miss Millett is 23 years old. Her grandfather farmed a tract near Hastings, Minn., where she was born and reared. Both of her parents are dead. Her father was employed by the Great Northern.

The wedding will take place in St. Paul in November. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hill, jr., will then leave for a five months' honeymoon in Hawaii, the Philippines, Australia and South Africa. Following the honeymoon, they will make their home in St. Paul and Mr. Hill will take a permanent place with the Great Northern railroad.

LOUIS W. HILL AND MISS DOROTHY VIRGINIA MILLETT, WHO ARE TO BE MARRIED IN NOVEMBER.

Shun the "Upstart" Bathtubs.

Theodore Roosevelt, in "All in the Family."

We children used "the bathroom" seriously. In it there was a deep narrow porcelain tub with faucets that trickled a tantalizingly thin stream of water from a height. That tub still stands at Sagamore. It has "defied the tooth of envious time." True, it has changed. Its sides are walled in with varnished planks, but "you may break, you may shatter the vase if you will, but the scent of the roses will hang round it still." There are a half dozen upstart bathrooms in various parts of the house. To us, however, the old tub is still supreme. My sister, Alice, when she comes up from Washington, always uses it, no matter how much more convenient any of its rivals may be.

That Was That.

"I think you should show your parents some respect and ask them if you can do things before you do them," said her dad sharply.

Afterwards.

By Edgar A. Guest.

A little woman, with silver hair,
Sitting alone in her rocking chair;
Sitting alone in the twilight gloom
Done with needle, and done with broom,
Done with duty and done with care
And all the pleasures which made life fair.

There is a man who used to be
A little boy at that woman's knee.
Time was she led him along the street
And watched and guided his eager feet,
But today no need of her hand he feels,
He is unafraid of the traffic's wheels.

And there is a woman, tall and true,
Who never runs back as she used to do
For the tender care of those willing hands,
Today she fashions her own headbands.
That once little girl has grown so wise
That she settles herself what doubts arise.

And I think as I walk by her house each day,
I, too, may be lonely and frail and gray,
For my children must grow, and the time must be
When they shall no longer have need of me.
Then I shall dream of the years gone by

ECONOMIC FREEDOM IS GOAL.

Business Women of World Who Face Same Problems Favor Union.

Troubles of women are much alike the world over, says Miss Lena Madesin Phillips, back after conducting sixty-one American business women on a good will trip to Europe.

"Everywhere women are having difficulty holding their own in a man-made business world. In every country of Europe, as in the United States, the ambition of women is to achieve for themselves economic independence."

In six of the thirteen countries visited by the American delegation from the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs, committees have been formed to organize a federation similar to the one here.

Miss Phillips said that a conference will be called at Geneva within a year to discuss the formation of an international organization.

Mrs. T. W. H., Gainesville, Fla.—Maybe it is because they can't get enough clothes on a woman scarecrow to scare the birds.

From the Logansport Pharos-Tribune.

THE Pharos-Tribune's fifty-years-ago column carried recently a line to the effect that the wood merchants were making their appearance, which means a lot to one whose memory glides back to the days of hickory and sugar fires.

Nobody burned coal in those old days, that is nobody in residences, except the handful who had furnaces, the great majority relying on stoves which devoured wood in a fashion which kept all the husky boys bent over the buck after school and on Saturdays.

The most important of chores was to keep the wood box filled, and this had to be taken care of before there was any shinny on the ice, for we didn't call it hockey in those days. And we didn't play it with a ball and with clubs bought in the sporting goods store; we played it with an old tin can and our clubs were cut off the tree, it often being a long walk to find one with the proper crook at the end.

Of course, having no coal and no furnaces, ninety-nine houses out of 100 were cold as Greenland, except the few spots which were civilized for bare living purposes and the oven which was usually in commission with the baking of bread and potatoes and pies, but how that stove did gnaw its way into a wood pile!

Then in the sitting room there was a round iron stove which licked up wood, getting red hot in no time, when the damper had to be turned and the doors opened, and this situation continued until long in the eighties when the discovery of natural gas emancipated the boys and enabled people to throw their homes open all the year around.

There were not so many fireplaces in action before the coming of gas, for the stove had taken the place of the old open hearth fire, the most fascinating feature indoor life will ever know. In fact we believe there are ten times as many fireplaces in service now as back in the early eighties.

Every town had its wood yards and every farm its cords of it and on almost every hillside the music of the old cross-cut saw could be heard, though we must confess it didn't seem very musical to us when we had to push it.

Why Men Prefer Business Girl to 'A Society Woman

Allison Bryan in Smart Set Magazine.

MORE American business men than ever before are marrying their secretaries or feminine office aides rather than girls from their own social groups. More of them, too, feel closer to the girl who works with them than to the wife they leave at home, whether the feeling leads to romance or not. Neither the secretary nor circumstances, but the wife herself, is usually to blame.

The explanation is that too many wives, particularly those whose young lives have been spent entirely in society, and without business experience, regard talk of business as a bore. The ambitious modern business girl, on the other hand, is eager to learn all she can and consequently looks up to the boss as both teacher and hero. And men do like to be looked up to. Consequently, more and more of them are dodging the society girl as a prospective bride, or seeking sympathy more from the girl in the office than the one at home.

WHY WIVES ARE TO BLAME.

Marrying her employer is an ambition to many a girl, a step upward. Place in competition with her a girl who condescends to accept man as an equal—if not an inferior—and the result is amazing. More and more the business men are marrying girls who look up to them.

Nevertheless, most men play fair. They seek out companionship in their offices only when their wives fail them.

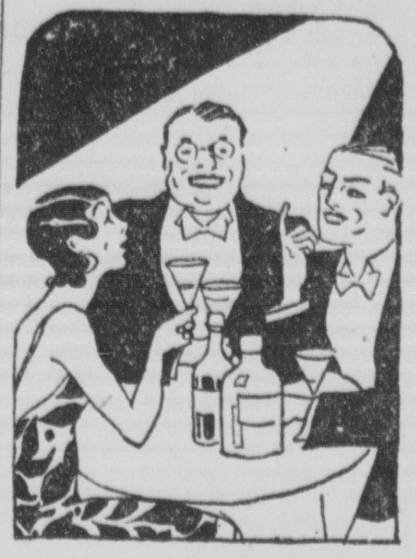
With half a chance a man will pour out his triumphs and his anxieties and his ideas, all that his wife can "get" of them. It is her affair to invite those confidences so often that she will understand more and more of them as time goes on, so that she will appreciate the vivid and dramatic incidents even if the routine remains a mystery.

WIVES APPEAR BORED.

But how many wives are anything but bored by shop talk? How many dismiss every reference to business bruskly, even brutally? How many see that the home which costs him $4,500 a year gives him as much service as the girl who costs him $45 a week?

Many a wife may well ask herself if she contributes as much directly to her husband's comfort, to his ease of mind, to his personal service, as the girl in his office. She may well ask herself — before the man asks himself. Sometimes his answer breaks up a home.

Witty Kitty.



The girl friend says people have pretty well stopped whining about prohibition, and quite a few are trying to gin and bear it.

How Edna Spent Five Grand.

From the Portland Oregonian.

Edna Peters of Miami, Fla., is the winner of the typical American girl contest, which carried with it a prize of $5,000. One is not informed as to the qualifications and attributes required by the judges of the contest, but it seems probable that Edna is a nice girl. She would have to be. There's her name, for another thing. Surely it is typical of plain folks who christened her plainly. Yes, it has undoubted claims upon being the typical name of the typical American girl.

Here's something, however, that we rather hesitate to disclose. But it has been in the papers, anyhow, so one might as well reveal it. Edna Peters already has spent her $5,000. "Ah!" you gasp. You may well gasp. But you are going to be even more astonished. Because Edna didn't buy a toy dog with it. And Edna didn't purchase a one-way ticket to Hollywood. Nor did Edna yield to the blandishments of any automobile salesman, and become possessed of the sweetest little car, all nickel and mohair and silk.

Edna took that $5,000, she did, and squandered it within an hour on the mortgage that had bowed Pa Peters down with gloom—the mortgage on the old home. And there was sunshine in Florida again, and the tuneful twitterings of birds, and Pa Peters simply laughed and laughed. But we'll bet he hugged Edna, too, and glorified in her charming typicalness.

The NEW 50c Colgate Toothbrush

(Designed by Colgate Department of Dental Education)

GIVEN AWAY

Two 25c Tubes of Colgate Ribbon Dental Cream

$1.00 value for 50c

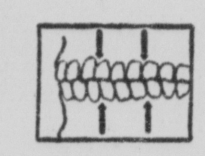
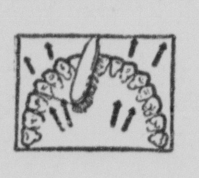
SAVE 50 CENTS

The Colgate brush has amazing penetrating, cleansing power . . . because the bristles are scientifically serrated . . . tufted . . . to get into the tiny fissures, crevices and hard-to-reach places where ordinary toothbrushes fail to penetrate.

Brush teeth with this up and down motion, advise dentists. The new Colgate Toothbrush was specially designed to make this action doubly effective. Do not brush across the teeth.





When you brush your teeth on the inside, use an in-and-out stroke. Note how wonderfully the firm bristles invigorate the gums.

FREE OFFER: To induce still more people to try Ribbon Dental Cream . . . the scientific dentifrice with the foaming, penetrating action . . . we make this remarkable offer. Only Colgate . . . world's largest maker of tooth paste . . . could finance such a proposition. The resources and guarantee of this hundred-million-dollar firm are behind this deal. There is no "catch" to this offer. Colgate simply wants you to try Ribbon Dental Cream. To repay you for doing this, we offer you a genuine new Colgate Toothbrush . . . as described . . . actual value 50 cents . . . ABSOLUTELY FREE!

The brush

This tooth brush — the newest, most advanced type known to dental science — was designed by the Colgate Department of Dental Education . . . a group of dentists who have studied the needs of hundreds of thousands of men, women and children.

Examine this brush. Study its shape, its size, its bristles. It is made by skilled American workers . . . under the most sanitary conditions . . . from selected, imported snow-white bristles of finest quality. Every brush is carefully inspected. Handles are of lovely transparent material, in 5 exquisite shades of green, purple, amber. Bristles are held in a firm vise-like grip that never loosens.

This brush is identical in quality, in size, in durability to nationally advertised brushes that sell regularly in the better stores at 50c. Now yours free with this unique offer.

The dentifrice

Colgate's Ribbon Dental Cream is the world's largest-selling tooth paste. More people use it . . . and more dentists recommend it . . . than any other dentifrice.

The reason for this is simply that Colgate's cleans teeth better. Colgate's contains the world's best cleansing agent — a penetrating foam that cleanses where the toothbrush cannot reach.

Your dentist will tell you that decay doesn't start on the smooth outer surfaces of the teeth . . . but in the tiny crevices where food particles and mucin collect.

No tooth brush can reach these hard-to-clean places. They must be cleansed by the dentifrice. Hence the real test of a tooth paste is its ability to get down into these crevices and cleanse them thoroughly. A scientific test recently proved that Colgate's has greater penetrating power than any of the leading tooth pastes on the market today — the secret of Colgate's superior cleansing power.

The foam of Colgate's carries a fine chalk powder . . . a polishing material prescribed by dentists . . . which polishes the enamel safely, brilliantly.

The Colgate method of scientific tooth brushing

After years of study and thousands of experiments, the Colgate Method of scientifically cleansing the teeth has been developed by the Colgate Dept. of Dental Education.

This Method is most effective when Ribbon Dental Cream is brushed on with the Colgate Brush. For the springy, serrated bristles, set at exactly the right distance, act in a way that applies the full, concentrated cleansing power of the famous Colgate foam . . . deep down into the "hard-to-clean" places. Only thus can you be sure of cleaning these difficult spots where decay lurks.

Start today to use the Colgate Method of Scientific Tooth Brushing . . . and note the difference in your teeth ten days hence.

NOTE!

This offer is strictly limited. The supply of brushes has been rigidly allotted to the stores which are co-operating in this great offer. They will not last long . . . once people read this announcement. So, act NOW! It may be months or even years before we can repeat this amazing proposition.

Little Stories for Bedtime

The Shadow-Children on a Cruise.

MIJ, Flor, Hanid, Yam and Knarf — the five little shadow-children with the turned-about names—were waiting for a carriage. They were in a strange city. The little real-children—their masters and mistresses—were all carrying little satchels. Mother and father had large valises. And there was also a trunk.

As you could not for the world guess where they were, I shall have to tell you. They were in a carriage leaving Jaffa, which is in far-off Palestine, on the coast of the Mediterranean Sea. The Mediterranean, my dears, is big enough to be an ocean. You cannot, no matter how strong your eyes may be, see to the other side.

The shadow-children, you understand, were accompanying the real-children, who, in turn, were accompanying their mother and father on a trip around the world. Now they were on their way to Vienna, the capital of Austria.

Hanid turned to Knarf and laughed. "Silly," she said. "We don't go by carriage at all. We go by boat."

Knarf tried to act as though he didn't hear her. Soon they came to the dock. The boat wasn't in the dock.

"There," said Knarf, turning to Hanid, "where's the boat?"

For a moment Hanid was puzzled. Then Yam shouted: "There it is!"

They looked. A large rowboat pulled up to the dock. Five dark-skinned men, wearing red fezes, were rowing.

"WE'RE GOING IN A ROWBOAT."

"O-oh," Mij said, "we're going to Vienna in a rowboat. That will be sport."

Hanid shook her head doubtfully. It didn't seem just right to her. Still, that was just what they appeared to be doing. Father and mother and the five children got into the boat, bag and baggage, and the dark-skinned men started rowing them out to sea. The men all stood up in the boat as they rowed.

"Will it take very long——?" asked Flor timidly. He didn't like the way the boat was tossing.

"It will take days and——" Hanid began, when suddenly she interrupted herself. "We won't be in this boat more than five minutes more!" She pointed straight ahead. They followed her finger and saw for the first time a steamer lying at anchor. They had not noticed it before because it had been partly hidden by a stone bulwark that extended out into the water.

Sure enough, just as Hanid said, they rowed straight for the steamer and in five minutes they reached the side where a long flight of stairs reached down from the upper deck almost to the level of the water. The rowboat drew up close to this flight of stairs and one by one the real-children, then mother and father, went up the stairs. Finally the shadow-children followed along, although no one noticed them. They were used to not being noticed, and didn't mind it in the least. In fact they even enjoyed it. It was like being invisible.

At length, after the boatman was paid and the baggage all stowed neatly away in the staterooms, the whole family came up on deck to watch the ship get under way.

They heard the first mate shout orders to the sailors. Then an immense machine on deck started turning noisily and up came the anchor at the end of a thick iron chain.

Hanid turned to the others. "Now we're going to——"

"—— to Vienna!" Knarf and Mij shouted in unison.

The clever little shadow-girl shook her head. "You two don't know any geography at all," she sighed. "I shall have to give you a lesson at once. Don't you know you can't get to Vienna by boat?"

Mij looked shamefaced. But Knarf smiled. "Of course, I know it. I said it just to see if you knew it too!"

The Importance of Color in the Bedroom

By Elsie de Wolfe

Elsie de Wolfe, now Lady Mendl, the best known woman interior decorator in America

PEOPLE seldom realize how much color means in the bedroom. Unconsciously it affects one's waking thought, and at night, when the light is about to be turned off, the last color upon which the eye has rested becomes shut in as a good or bad angel to influence one's dream.

Colors soothe or colors agitate. They create harmony or they voice disturbance. All colors are good if handled with discretion and taste—but any color becomes undesirable if thrown into the general plan of decoration without reserve and without knowledge.

Certain combinations produce the feeling of grinding saws—whereas others open vistas of rest and peace. Before using wallpapers and materials, before determining upon the tonality of beds and other furniture, before assembling chintzes and draperies, select samples or have these submitted to you.

Live with them a while. Look at them in the early morning light, gaze at them as twilight falls, become familiar with them—so that when you do arrive at a decision, these color combinations have become your friends or, if badly selected, your enemies. If at the end of the trial you find yourself still undecided, seek professional advice, and be guided thereby.

Even when one selects a primary color as the general tone of a bedroom one must not lose sight of the many shades which are practically by-products of this color. Wrong shades may clash whereas a proper blending may produce a charming result. For instance, yellow walls and blue woodwork are often very effective in a bedroom but be careful of the blues and yellows which are selected. Soft, neutral tones are usually most desirable.

Suit Color to Temperament

Certain colors seem appropriate for certain temperaments and certain ages. For children's bedrooms there should be light, gay colors—colors which suggest dancing steps and rippled laughter. But I do not believe that at any time bedrooms should be dull and sombre. Old age needs light and brightness even in the autumn of life. The primary colors can be softened and appropriated to that mellowness which age should suggest. The hair may be gray but nevertheless it can be silver sheened.

Greens properly used are invariably safe to conjure with. When God in His infinite wisdom threw a mantle of green over earth and forest, how marvelous was His choice! Driving along the country highways in the months of May and June, what is more powerful to heal the tired soul and the careworn mind than these avenues of spring green? Can you imagine the effect if we were dashed past vivid reds or aggressive oranges instead?

Remember that it is in the bedroom you are to rest, to think and dream and plan, and that from your bedroom you take your morning inspiration and your nightly benediction.

Casual Charm Achieved With Studied Care

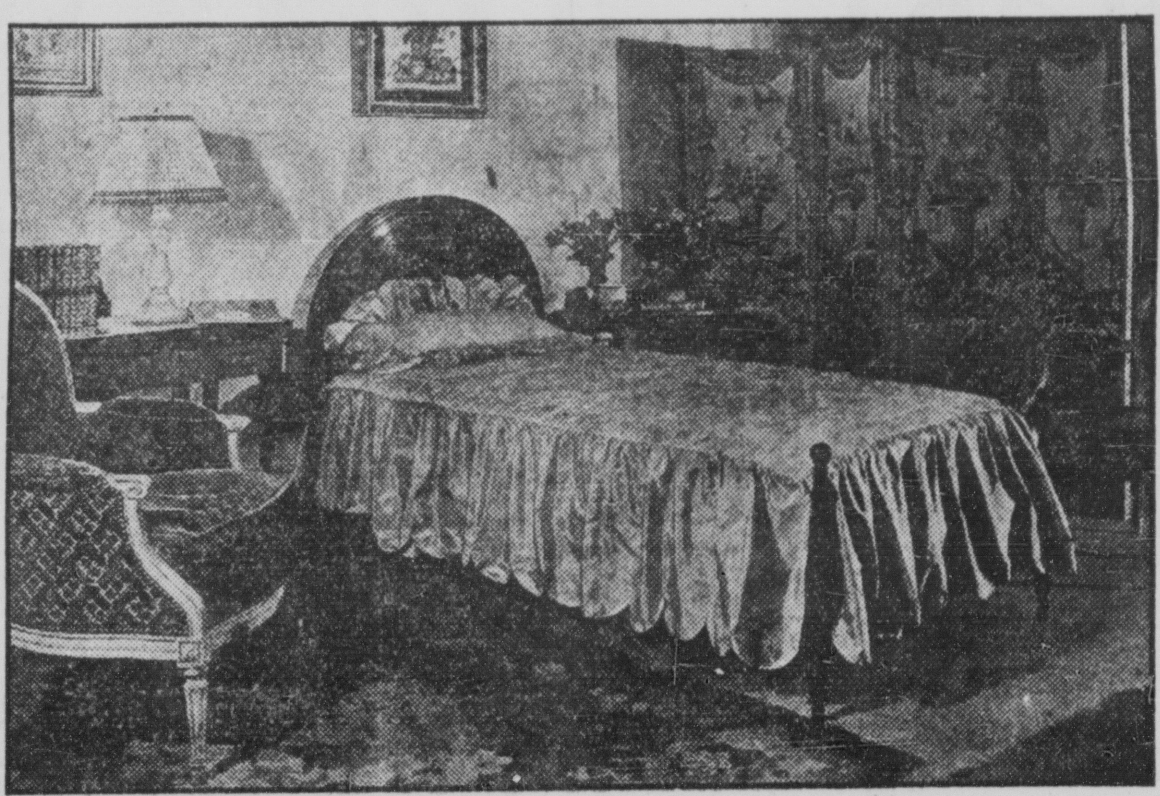
Occasional Pieces Thoughtfully Chosen Lend the Bedroom Varied Interest

Begin with a Charming Bed by Simmons and Your Room will Grow Lovelier Piece by Piece



A spacious bedroom combines some rare and lovely pieces from France with a harmonizing Simmons Bed No. 1581, $32.75

HAPPILY, for the woman who enjoys the pleasure of choosing lovely things, the vogue for furnishing not only the living rooms but even the bedrooms of the home with occasional pieces is increasing year by year.

And with good reason. For a room which has gathered unto itself things of individual charm and beauty from various corners of the world—or even from various stores in the same city—has a more special, more individual charm.

Furnish As You Go

Another advantage of this plan of furnishing is that which concerns the pocketbook. You can start your room with a bed, a mirror and a chest of drawers and after every succeeding birthday and Christmas you can apply those jolly little checks that you find under your plate in acquiring additional lovely pieces.

This also makes the fun of furnishing last longer and trains one's taste. After having lived with the bed and one or two other bits one knows so much better just the things one wants to go with them.

For this gradual furnishing of the bedroom, beds by Simmons are particularly well adapted. For Simmons makes a great many models—scores of designs and color combinations—as adaptable as the dandelion.

You can fit them in with Colonial furniture, Jacobean, Queen Anne or Louis XVI, Early American or Mid-Victorian and get charming effects.

The Beauty of Simmons Beds

In the large picture above one of the new Simmons models is shown—Bed No. 1638, which comes in walnut finish. Slender turned spindles at head and foot are relieved by an attractive grill motif. Combined with old oak tables, wing chairs and two lovely Jacobean chests against a chintz-hung wall, it makes a room of unusual interest.

In the other room a favorite Simmons Model, No. 1581 with a simple rounded head board and little low posts for a foot is the center of a delightful group of treasures which reflect the culture of France—a fine old hand-painted screen, an Aubusson rug, bergères, Provençal tables and chests of drawers—the kind of a room you use the clock around, as attractive for daytime use as it is comfortable at night.

This bed can be had in walnut finish, and a lovely light green with ivory panels blending with many colors. Or it can be painted to order at little extra cost.

Smart Modern Lines— Gay Decoration— In This Favorite Simmons Bed

WOOD FINISHES $35.00 GAY COLORS

So youthful and gay, and yet so smart and sophisticated—this bed is adaptable to many different types of homes—a chic town apartment, a homelike country house—for a guest room, a young girl's room. Its clean, modern lines and the absence of "fussy decoration," give it a charming distinction.

Bed No. 1636 comes in walnut, gray with brown and gold trim, and orchid with green and gold trim.

A NEW RADIO PHONE LINK

NORTH AND SOUTH AMERICA SOON WILL BE ABLE TO TALK.

It Will Be Possible to Get Connection From Any Telephone in the U. S. With Buenos Aires.

By MARTIN CODEL.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Persons in North and South Americas will soon be able to pick up their telephone receivers and talk to each other by a radio-telephone connection similar to the one that now links the United States, Canada and Mexico with nearly all the countries of Europe.

The new circuit will probably be in operation shortly after January 1, 1930. The finishing touches are now being put on the station at Lawrenceville, N. J., which will connect with a station in Buenos Aires. The development of the intercontinental telephone system has been undertaken by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company in co-operation with the International Telephone and Telegraph Company.

The International Telephone and Telegraph Company has been widening its control of Central and South American telephone and telegraph systems and recently has been obtaining wireless concessions in the various Latin American countries. Its announced purpose is to co-ordinate wireless telephone, wireless telegraph, land telephone, land telegraph and submarine cables together "to perform the common task of linking cities and countries to each other and to the rest of the world."

The highly developed North American end of the circuit will make it possible to speak from any telephone in the United States through Lawrenceville to Buenos Aires. The Buenos Aires station will serve the telephones of operating telephone companies affiliated with the I. T. and T., which is best known as the international system.

Argentina, Chile and Uruguay are now linked by long line connections, so that the service at the South American end will probably first be offered in those countries.

"30,000 lives at stake!"

The story of Phil Klipp, chief wireless operator, S. S. Pres. Harding (1923)

"Remember the horrors of Russia back in '22? Well, the lives of 30,000 people depended on my Brandes head phones. At that time I was aboard the S. S. Bellingham, discharging relief cargoes of grain for the city of Theodosia on the Black Sea. Telephone wires—cable wires—the Bolsheviks had destroyed them all. Our only means of communication with the American Relief headquarters in Constantinople, 450 miles away, were my wireless and Brandes head phones. In 12 days, I sent 185,000 words. If my Brandes head phones had gone dead on me—for only a day—! Well—now you know why anything that carries the name of Brandes stands aces high with me. That new set is a wonder—and such a low price!"

CITY HISTORY HAS A BEARING ON THE WHARF SITE QUESTION

For Seventy-Five Years the Foot of Main Street Has Been Owned, William H. Wallace Writes, and to Go Elsewhere Would Be a Blunder.

TO THE STAR: Several citizens who are loath to see the wharf site taken away from the place dedicated for that purpose by the founders of our city and visioned by that real father of Kansas City—John Calvin McCoy—have asked me to make a statement to The Star covering the points in controversy regarding the selection and improvement of the site.

Their idea and mine simply is to point out some obvious facts, historical and legal, that seem to make the suggestion of the selection of any other site than the one the city now owns at the foot of Main street as not merely a mistake but a blunder that would prove seriously detrimental to the best interests of the city.

The first question to be settled, it seems to me, is: Does Kansas City already own wharves and docks and grounds along the river front sufficient to constitute a proper site for future improvement? My answer is: It does and has owned and operated them seventy-five years. The United States government, for more than fifty years, has used these wharves and docks, acknowledging the sole rights of the city in their ownership.

Dates to City's Founding.

The city now owns the river front from Broadway to Troost avenue by dedication for wharf purposes dating back to the city's foundations, and it also owns grounds along the south bank of the river from Troost avenue to Scott avenue, in all a frontage of perhaps a mile and a half.

How the latter frontage was acquired, is not material now, but I desire to show by what title the city holds the property and grounds it is now using as a wharf and which in my opinion are available for all the purposes of improvement under the bond issue.

Prior to 1840 the pioneers who founded the city effected an organization known as "the Old Town Proprietors" for the purposes of platting the lands purchased from Gabriel Prudhomme into the original townsite of Kansas City, then known as Old Town. This farm extended from the Missouri River to Independence avenue and from Broadway to Troost avenue. There were fourteen of these original "proprietors": John Calvin McCoy, William Gillis, William L. Sublette, Moses G. Wilson, Fry P. McGee, Abraham Fonda, William M. Chick, Oliver Caldwell, George W. Tate, Jacob Ragan, William Collins, James Smart, Samuel C. Owens and Russell Hicks.

John Calvin McCoy was the surveyor of the company and the man who actually platted and laid out the Old Town site. On the townsite plat the town was laid out in streets, blocks, lots and certain parcels known as "lands," dedicated for public purposes.

One "Parcel" the River Land.

Among the latter was a block of ground lying immediately south of the present county courthouse, which was designated "Land 21," afterwards known as "Shelley Park," but originally donated to the public for a graveyard and so deeded to the city. Another tract was the block upon which the city market and the city hall now stand, which was set apart for "a market place." The third parcel of importance in the present controversy was the land along the river front at the foot of Main street including Front street, a strip of ground running approximately from Broadway to Troost, which was deeded to the city for the purposes of wharves and docks.

In the course of time the tract known as "Land 21" became filled with the graves of the pioneers. Gradually the graveyard tract was used as a thoroughfare. Finally the tract was graded and reduced to the level of the surrounding streets and completely abandoned as a graveyard. The city, to establish its ownership, made a park out of it, calling it "Shelley Park," after the mayor, George M. Shelley.

A Suit to Recover.

The heirs of the original proprietors, believing the original purposes of the dedication of the tract had been abandoned when it ceased to be used as a graveyard, brought suit to recover title to the tract. Judge Edward L. Scarritt and myself were among the lawyers representing the heirs and followed the litigation to the supreme court of Missouri. The case, called the Campbell case, was fought bitterly, stretching over ten years of litigation and being tried in its various phases in Kansas City, Warrensburg and Liberty, finally going on appeal to the supreme court on the question of abandonment. As the decision in this case on the question of abandonment has a direct bearing upon the fate of the city's present docks and wharves and lands originally dedicated for that purpose along Front street, and this phase of the question seems to have been wholly ignored by the advocates of other sites, I desire now to call attention to the settled law of Missouri, as laid down in the Campbell case, governing the abandonment of specially dedicated lands. I consider this the outstanding question in this whole site controversy, and I am surprised that so little attention has been paid to this feature of it.

Is an Abandonment.

Let me state the proposition as simply and directly as possible. It is proposed to purchase a site somewhere else along the river—whether the Woodswether site or another does not matter. Whenever such action is taken and new wharves and docks are erected and used, it constitutes an abandonment of the purposes for which the fathers of the city dedicated the lands now used for wharf purposes and available for further development along Front street. In short, the law of Missouri says that the heirs of the original proprietors of the land may step in and claim the land as they did in the Campbell case. The decision was written by Judge Martin. Let me quote the language of the court:

> When land is donated for a mere public use, such as highways, streets, wharves, docks or landing places, the use of the land reverts to the donor upon discontinuance or abandonment of the particular use for which it was donated. This is the result according to the authorities governing the modern law of dedication.

There is no mistaking the purport of this language. If a new site is purchased, the old site is abandoned, and by such abandonment, under the law, the lands which for seventy-five years have been held by the city for wharves and docks will revert in title to the heirs of the original dedicators. Is it worth this sacrifice?

Based on Experience.

The selection of this original wharf site was not a matter of the arbitrary judgment of the old proprietors. Undoubtedly they selected the most available river frontage, but they were guided by the experience of the old river men. I have before me a list of steamboats that were on the river from 1819 to 1870. They numbered some 737 boats. They had been landing at various places between Westport Landing and Lexington. There was a long contention between the cities of Independence, Lexington, Blue Mills, Sibley and other landings as to the best port for the steamboat traffic that fed the caravans of the Santa Fe trail. Finally Kansas City triumphed. It was pronounced as the best landing along the river between St. Louis and Omaha. The men who knew the river picked it and the fathers of the city dedicated the ground for that purpose. It was the best site when hundreds of steamboats plied the river. It is the best site today. Why go elsewhere?

The only objection ever made to the Main street landing worthy of consideration was that the original dedication did not include sufficient lands for present day purposes. This objection was based on the fact the lands, including the whole of Front street, were and are now occupied by the Missouri Pacific railroad tracks. It is a known fact the Missouri Pacific originally took these lands for railroad purpose by sufferance, and this objection is no longer of any value in view of a decision of the United States circuit court which recently came into my hands.

Decision Settles Question.

This decision never has been mentioned in any phase of the controversy over the wharf site, yet it settles beyond all doubt the right of the city to restore its title to the railroad lands and to resume the enjoyment of the full powers over all the lands involved from the south line of Front street to the river's edge. This was a voluntary suit in equity brought in 1911 by the Missouri Pacific railroad for the purposes shown in the following caption: "To Compromise the suit in Equity pending in the United States Circuit Court between the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, Complainant, and Kansas City, and others, defendants, and for other purposes." The decision was filed for record July 18, 1911, in Book B. 1360, page 374.

In the petition of the Missouri Pacific in this suit, the railroad specifically disclaimed all rights, title and interest in the ground included in Front street then and now occupied by its tracks. It further stated that it was the railroad's desire to compromise the matters in dispute between the railroad and the city about the future occupancy of Front street. In the second section of their petition, the railroad stated that the parties had agreed the ground thus occupied was to be considered as leased ground, the lease to continue for thirty years, the railroad to pay the city $150 a month for the use of Front street. I find from examination of the records at the city hall that the Missouri Pacific railroad has actually paid this rental of $150 a month and is paying it now.

An Agreement to Vacate.

But the most important stipulation was the agreement by the railroad to vacate the lands occupied by its tracks upon six months' notice given by the city, the railroad company agreeing to remove its tracks within that time and to deliver up possession to the city. This matter finally was determined by court decision. This equitable agreement completely does away with the objection made that the lands from the south side of Front street to the river's edge are not wholly available for wharf site purposes. The title of the city to the street occupied by the railroad can be restored at any time.

There is no question in my mind that the purchase of a new site for wharf purposes never entered the contemplation of the voters when the proposition was submitted, and for the good reason everybody believed the city already owned a site. This is clear from the wording of the proposition submitted for the wharf, the airport and the city hall. At the election May 8, 1928, the wharf proposition upon which the voters expressed their intentions and which carried read as follows: "For the construction, improvement and equipment of municipal docks and wharves, $500,000."

No Mention of a Site.

No mention was made of a site or the purchase of a site. Beyond all doubt the people of Kansas City had in mind that they already owned a municipal site now in use for wharves and docks, located at the foot of Main. The selection of a site was not thought of. In another proposition submitted the same day the purchase of a site was specifically provided for as follows: "For the construction and equipment of a city hall building and the acquisition of a site, $3,750,000." This clearly expressed the intention to obtain a site apart from the present one upon which the city hall stands. Again the word "site" was used in the proposition submitted August 7, 1928, for the airport, which read as follows: "For the establishment and equipment of a municipal airport and the acquisition and improvement of a site, $1,000,000."

Certainly, if a new site was intended to be purchased for wharves and docks other than the one now owned and used by the city, that item would have been stated specifically in the proposition submitted. The voters never had an opportunity, and did not exercise any right, to vote upon a site in the case of the municipal wharf proposition. That question was not submitted and not voted on for the simple reason that everybody understood that a new site was not necessary—the city already had ample site facilities. In the other propositions mentioned, it was understood that a new site was contemplated for the city hall, as that matter had been discussed in the public prints, and for the airport, which was a new and original proposition.

It is useless at this late hour in the controversy to discuss the sites proposed west of Broadway. The public fully understands the facts. It is simply the question of a site where a sandbar is continually forming or a site on sand-made ground.

HELD IN TED LEWIS THEFT.

(By the Associated Press.)

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 3.—An order committing Jack Noonan, brother of Sally O'Neil and Molly O'Day, film actresses, to the psychopathic ward for mental observation, was issued yesterday in superior court after he had been arraigned on a burglary charge.

Noonan was ordered to reappear October 14 to plead. He was returned here from New York, where he was captured after Ted Lewis, musician, charged Noonan had stolen $8,000 in property from his home. Noonan denied the charge.

A NEW MILLIKAN DISCOVERY.

(By the Associated Press.)

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 3.—A conference of seismologists, meeting at the California Institute of Technology seismographic laboratory near Annandale, a suburb, today had before it an outline of the latest discovery by Dr. Robert A. Millikan, noted physicist, in connection with his investigation of the cosmic ray.

Dr. Millikan, president of the institute, disclosed he had differentiated between the cosmic ray, which he discovered, and rays given off by the earth, and asserted the differentiation may hold the key to new and valuable studies of the earth's crust, and to prediction or location of future earthquakes.

MOTHERS now learn value of MAGNESIA

Because it is so helpful in keeping babies and children healthy and happy, every mother should know about Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

This harmless, almost tasteless preparation is most effective in relieving those symptoms of babies and children generally caused by souring food in the little digestive tract, such as sour belching, frequent vomiting, feverishness, colic. As a mild laxative it acts gently, but certainly, to open the little bowels in constipation, colds, children's diseases.

A teaspoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia does the work of half a pint of lime water in neutralizing cow's milk for infant feeding, and preventing hard curds. Its many uses for mother and child are fully explained in the interesting book, "Useful Information." It will be sent you, FREE. Write The Phillips Co., 117 Hudson St., New York, N. Y.

In buying, be sure to get genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Doctors have prescribed it for over 50 years.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of the Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor, Charles H. Phillips, since 1875.

BE PREPARED WITH AUTOMATIC GAS HEAT

It usually takes a good frost to bring to the average family realization that no thought has been given to the heating plant since they last let the fire die out.

We often need a good cold snap to remind us that last Winter we resolved never to go through another season of furnace drudgery.

Frosty Fall mornings and cool evenings call for occasional heat and gas is certainly the ideal fuel to use for it can be turned on and off at will, assuring a comfortable heated home at all times regardless of weather conditions.

Decide now to install automatic gas heat in your home and you will be prepared at all times, regardless of weather conditions, with the best house heating fuel available.

—that certain group who, in every community, establish the mode

Eveready Radio
THE PRECISION INSTRUMENT

THERE ARE many fortunate people in this world to whom good taste is second nature. They live pleasantly, yet not ostentatiously. They dress well, yet without extremes of style. Every possession of theirs bespeaks an admirable and tempered attitude toward living.

And quite naturally these are the people who are buying the new Eveready Radio. For there, too, just as in their houses, their clothes, yes, even their friends, they take excellence for granted . . . a radio which brings the smartest dance-orchestra into their living-room . . . which takes them to the sidelines of the big games . . . which places them ten feet from the speaker's table . . . this is the sort of reception they expect, and get—from this remarkable radio receiver.

But such people—those who are buying the new Eveready Radio—look for something more in their material possessions. They want permanence. This radio receiver is built to last. It is precision-built. Each part is put together with as much care as if an aviator's life depended on the winding of a coil. The assumption is that Eveready Radio users want a fine instrument, as fine in its way as all their other material possessions.

Mystifying technical names, new accoutrements, devices and mechanisms bore the buyers of this radio. They know they have the best. They know that improvements will be added from time to time as the large scientific organization which makes this receiver tests and uncovers their merits. But they leave the details to the experts. That is their attitude towards radio . . . houses . . . motorcars . . . life in general.

And so, if you are interested in effects and take the causes for granted, if you order your life according to this principle and to the point, you will want the new Eveready Radio. See it. Hear it. Note how beautiful the cabinetwork is. Ask for the explanation, if you like, of its "weather-proof" principle; but remember that the effect is this—even on muggy nights the reception is remarkably clear.

BOW TO THE RIO GRANDE

The Silt-Locked Buildings Are Deserted and Centuries of Battles With Water Have Made the Town a Memory.

(By the Associated Press.)

SAN MARCIAL, N. M., Oct. 3.—San Marcial, ancient village of the Spanish conquistadors, has lost its centuries-old battle with flood waters of the Rio Grande. The town rapidly is being reduced to a mere flag stop on the Santa Fe railroad.

Today the little town, where villagers for generations fought the Rio Grande, is without permanent inhabitants. A few adobe dwellings that have withstood the August and September floods are buried in silt, so the few relief workers there walk without difficulty into the second stories of the houses. In general, the layer of silt has raised the town level eight or ten feet. The streets are dry and choked with sun-baked sand.

The old picturesque building from which the last fifty-four persons were rescued in boats at the peak of last month's flood will be abandoned. Although no official announcement has been received from Santa Fe officials, it is generally understood the railroad plans to reconstruct one main line of trackage through the town, build one spur and use the second floor of the Harvey House for a waiting room. There will likely be only a station agent and a telegraph operator on duty there.

Installment Buying.

From the Detroit News.

H. Gordon Selfridge, who was born in Wisconsin, learned business in Chicago, took abroad the idea of the big department store and revolutionized retail merchandising in London, recently in an interview told the British people that the principle of installment buying and selling is sound and offers a remarkable stimulus to business and prosperity. They have learned to listen to Mr. Selfridge as one who demonstrates theories by successful accomplishment.

Buying goods on partial payments, Mr. Selfridge said, is not essentially different from banking. Both involve the elements of credit and time. The bankers have made safe their advances of credit by making sure that the money loaned will be put to productive uses. Those who sell goods on partial payments need only to be assured of the honesty and earning capacity of those whom they trust. Honest people who buy and promise to pay are stimulated to save, and only a few of the millions are so constituted as to be able to save without some incentive.

If Mr. Selfridge's newest preachment has the influence of his former example important changes may result in British economic affairs.

OFFICIAL OF GIRLS' GROUP.

The Meeting Monday Night Will Be of Interest to Laymen.

The public is invited next Monday night to attend the first night meeting of the Kansas City Southwest Clinical Society at the Hotel President.

The clinical society long has felt there should be a better understanding between the medical profession and the laity. For this reason the society has given the first night of the conference to a meeting at which discussions of the doctor's duty to the public and the public's duty to physicians will be heard.

Dr. Jabez N. Jackson, former president of the American Medical Association, will preside. John H. Atwood will present "The Layman's View of the Specialist, the City Doctor and the Country Doctor." Mr. Atwood will take the place of Senator Allen of Kansas, who will be unable to attend.

Dr. Logan Clendening will tell of "The City Doctor of Today and Yesterday." Dr. R. F. Lischer, Mascoutah, Ill., will give "The Country Doctor of Today and Yesterday."

The Canti film will be shown at this meeting. This motion picture shows the growth of cancer cells and the destruction of the same cells, in certain cases, by the use of radium. Dr. Ferdinand Helwig, pathologist of St. Luke's hospital, will lecture as the film is shown.

The conference opens officially at 8 o'clock Monday morning with the registration of visitors.

HIS A HARD TASK

MacDonald's Political Opponents Hope for an Issue on Which to Put Him Out.

A NEW NAVALISM THEORY

The Question Is One of Vital Concern to Great Britain's Parties.

The Success of the Washington Mission May Decide Prime Minister's Future.

The following is the second of three articles by The Star's Roving Correspondent, just back from England, on the subject of Premier MacDonald, who is on the way across the sea to Washington for conferences with President Hoover on naval limitations.

In England navalism is one of those nationalistic principles which Socialism objects to as helping to supply a "material interpretation of history." The principle views the national as apart from the international welfare. But in no country in the world has this national interest been more clearly recognized than in England. Navalism is a traditional policy. Tory, Liberal and Labor governments have accepted it as an interest removed from the contentions of domestic politics—something almost like the established church.

British statesmanship has viewed this interest in the light of Britain's insular position and her imperative needs in war, and not until now, when a new world theory of navalism based on treaties has come to the fore, through the initiative of the United States, has the subject become one of potential concern to British political parties. The result of Prime Minister MacDonald's mission to the United States in furtherance of the new theory may determine whether this potential concern of British politics is to become actual.

He Wears a Halter.

To the extent that Mr. MacDonald is in office by the sufferance of the Tory and Liberal parties, he goes to Washington with a halter around his neck. The reason he is in office is that these parties have no issue on which to put him out. It is only human and political that they should wish for such an issue, and if it should be one clearly involving a national and not a mere party interest, they would be the better pleased.

Nobody can doubt that Mr. MacDonald, who went into political exile in 1914 because he opposed England's entrance into the World War, is sincerely in sympathy with President Hoover's purpose to halt a naval race and is ready to co-operate with him in extending the principle of naval limitations, or of reduction, which is the word the President prefers, inaugurated by the Washington conference of 1922.

Not only is this a purpose which has the approval of Mr. MacDonald's political and social convictions and of the doctrines of his party, but it is one necessary to be achieved if he hopes to carry out Labor's domestic program in England. A naval race, imposing new burdens of taxation, would wreck that program.

The Tories Would Like It.

But to see Labor's domestic program wrecked would, of course, be a very pleasing spectacle to the Tories. Mr. MacDonald's necessity to reduce naval expenditure and free the British budget for other claims upon it is the opposition's opportunity. To write a new naval treaty, therefore, of the scope his convictions would dictate is not a choice open to him. Despite the gestures toward treaty navies which the opposition in Britain have made, they would not accept a treaty made by a Labor government if it gave them any opportunity to demonstrate to the country that it did not safeguard the national interest. Here is Mr. MacDonald's danger in taking to Washington an olive branch of naval parity from a country in which his opposition in parliament is the late Tory government of Mr. Baldwin, which only two years ago refused to grant that parity.

To be quite plain, there are, from the practical viewpoint of party politics, only two possible results of Mr. MacDonald's mission that would wholly please his opponents.

Hope for the Latter.

One is that he should fail to write a treaty and the other is that he should write a treaty upon which they could put him out of office. The latter result alone they can hope for. The conference will not fail, because the exchanges already completed between Washington and Westminster have established definitely a basis upon which the treaty will be written. If such a basis hadn't been found, there would be no conference.

But the Tory party—the official MacDonald opposition — representing broadly as it does the property and privileged interests of Britain, as well as the traditional foreign policy of the crown, is by no means convinced that the granting of naval parity to the United States is either a principle which it can accept with its nationalistic party doctrines or that the country is willing to accept.

Being now in opposition and looking for a chance to get back on the treasury bench, it is only natural that it should be less eager now to carry out the Washington program at the behest of a Labor government than it was when it had the initiative in its own hands. When it had that initiative at Geneva in 1927 it refused to write a treaty.

And His Hands Are Tied.

Lord Cecil, himself a member of the then government, and who may be said to be the English Borah in point of disarmament convictions, has disclosed how, as a representative of the Baldwin government at Geneva, his hands were tied by Downing street and the admiralty. If the Tories would not let their own man write a parity treaty in 1927, will they let a Labor government write one now? Not unless they become convinced the naval-mindedness of the English people has changed since Nelson's day.

It is a political tradition in England that whatever changes of government occur the continuity of the country's foreign policy must not be broken. England's sea policy is a part of her foreign policy. The British people have been educated for generations to believe that their security depends upon Britain's command of the seas. That is a national truism. Only the British navy kept Napoleon out of England. When he dominated the continent and was issuing his decrees from every capital of Europe, the British navy marked the limits of his power.

Stopped by the Channel.

The conqueror who scaled the Alps and the Pyrenees was stopped by the twenty-two miles of water that separates the continent of Europe from the British Isles. America's second war of independence was fought to compel Britain to relinquish a claim that was a part of this same sea policy. The British, living on an island with a population created by industrialism which cannot feed itself, always have clung to the one theory of defense that has served them in the past. They must command the seas that flow between their grocery store and their back door to live. Their navy is their delivery wagon.

It is easy to understand how the Tories feel about it. They have advertised their feelings. In the late session of parliament, when Mr. MacDonald made the briefest possible declaration with respect to the limitations negotiations, he was questioned closely by Winston Churchill and others of the late government as to whether he was proceeding with the approval of the admiralty. It was a pointed question and a painful one for Mr. MacDonald. It was the admiralty that put its foot down on a naval accord two years ago.

The Admiralty in It.

Mr. MacDonald, though guarded in his reply, was forced to admit, of course, that the admiralty would be consulted. The admiralty must be the professional and expert adviser to all governments on naval matters. Mr. MacDonald then was pressed to say whether the minimum of reductions would be within the limits set by the admiralty as necessary to the national safety. To this the prime minister made the retort, more effective in a parliamentary sense than responsive, that he very well understood the responsibilities of his position and required no instruction upon them from the other side of the house.

Ramsay MacDonald knows then all about the heavy parliamentary guns that are ready to be trained upon him when the house of commons reconvenes after his return from Washington. They will not be trained with too much consideration for the fundamentals involved. Fundamentals generally are ignored in politics. They will be trained by party marksmen. Even the accommodating gesture to Washington which Mr. MacDonald made at the last session of suspending construction on some minor naval projects was sharply challenged by his foes.

Eager for an Opening.

He was asked how, in view of the unemployment already existing, he proposed to take care of the additional unemployment that would be created by slowing down work in the dockyards. That disclosed how little the MacDonald opposition is inclined to overlook any handle that might fit their ax.

It is not for Americans to be shocked at motives thus disclosed as the springs of action in British politics. We don't have to go so far from home to be shocked in that way. But a knowledge of the political dangers at home that attend Mr. MacDonald's effort to cooperate with President Hoover's purposes ought to heighten the respect we are bound to have for the sincerity and courage with which he has undertaken to redeem the pledges of his party as well as the mistakes of the government he succeeded.

Nor is this the full story of Mr. MacDonald's resolute courage. He is fully aware that this political danger at home is not the only danger that awaits him. He knows that a section of American political opinion is prepared to try to put naval terms up to him that he could not accept and that would wreck the conference if they should be injected into it. Senator Borah, it may be predicted, will not overlook the opportunity to bring forward his alternative for the parity solution, a solution which he holds never can be found.

Has an Alternative.

His alternative is a codification of international law with respect to the principle of the freedom of the seas and the rights of neutrals in war. Mr. Borah will not get that alternative on the agenda. The agenda is closed. But he will air it on the floor of the senate as he has done in the past, and will brandish the threat of opposition to the ratification of the treaty if it does not include the acceptance by Britain of the principle for which he contends.

But while this side show will never make the big top, it will not lessen the British prime minister's political difficulties. He has his "back benchers" to reckon with as well as his opposition in front of him. Mr. Borah in British parlance, is a back bencher to the Hoover administration. Mr. MacDonald's back benchers are those who sit in the house of commons as members of his party, but who attack him from the rear. They are the wild men from the Clyde, and recognizing as they do a back bencher in Mr. Borah, they will be very happy to join him in what they regard as an attack on the whole principle of navalism.

Join in the Hoots.

With them navalism and imperialism are synonymous terms, and they are anti-imperialists. Mr. MacDonald's socialism is not their kind. They frequently join the Tories in hooting it. They will join their fellow back bencher from Idaho in hooting a naval treaty that contains any recognition whatever of navalism, and especially a navalism that leaves unchallenged England's age-old sea policy.

"Socialism in our time," meaning the hasty pudding Socialists who will not consent to defer the millennium beyond next week, have no more use for that sea policy than has Mr. Borah. They are not against it because it may conflict with America's sea policy, because they have no more use for the American navy than they have for the navy of their own country. They are against all navies and all armaments. They are pacifists. They are supporters of the "No More War" movement which has its sign out rather conspicuously in England and is pledging men and women to not fight for their country or render aid or comfort to any Englishman who does.

The American senate back benchers, therefore, while they will not succeed in substituting their basis for a naval treaty for the one agreed upon by President Hoover and Prime Minister MacDonald, are likely to supply considerable ammunition for the house of commons back benchers to shoot when the treaty gets there.

Commons Not Likely to Do It.

Probably it would not be a bad guess that the senate back benchers will vote for the ratification of the treaty in the end, but the house of commons back benchers are not likely to know that. Until they find it out they will be useful allies to the Tories if the Tories decide the issue is good enough on which to challenge MacDonald.

The senate back benchers probably can be placated by the appointment of a commission to study the problem of a codification of international law. That would bottle them up until the commission should report, and that probably would be quite a little time hence. That action might, too, drive a wedge between Mr. MacDonald's back benchers and their Tory allies, and permit him to get his treaty through. His difficulty is, of course, as it is in a lesser degree that of President Hoover, that in both countries the political and social forces that wish to do something to lessen the burdens and dangers of nationalistic armaments do not wish the same results or have common motives in wishing to realize them.

DEATH BREAKS A GREAT EUROPEAN TRIUMVIRATE

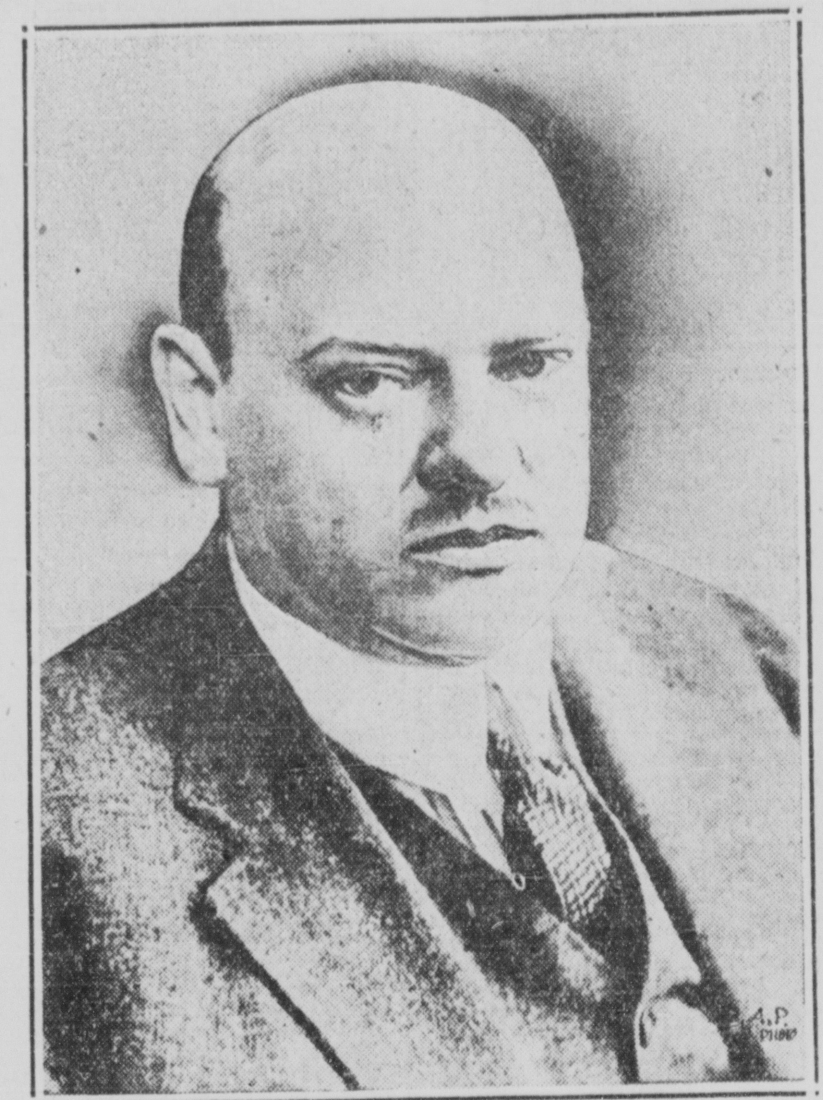
(By a Member of The Star's Staff.)

OFTEN, in Europe, they referred to them—Stresemann, Briand and Chamberlain—as the "Three Musketeers for Peace." Three world statesmen utterly unlike in personality, representing the diverse interests of Germany, France and Great Britain, yet they contributed more to the restoration of stability and confidence in Europe after the war than any others. It was recognized as fitting that the three should divide, as they did, the Nobel prize for their peace efforts.



DR. GUSTAV STRESEMANN, GERMAN FOREIGN MINISTER, WHO DIED EARLY TODAY.

Everyone wondered how three men so utterly unlike could work so harmoniously together. Stresemann was the German type so often caricatured in the heat of war days—thick-necked; big rolls of fat below and above the collar; close-cropped, almost bullet-shaped head, and a harsh, guttural voice. Briand has the Latin face, the drooping mustache, the keen, twinkling eyes, with the soul of a poet and the voice of liquid music. Chamberlain is austere and frigid, with immaculate dress, silk topper and monocle, speaking to few and communing with himself and the past. No stage Englishman ever overdid Sir Austen in person. Yet work together they did, this queer triumvirate, and so fond did they become of each other and so intimate an understanding did they reach, with mutual confidence taken for granted, that when the problems of torn and hating Europe seemingly had reached an impasse the foreign ministers of the three powers would get off at some neutral meeting ground, generally Geneva, and somehow out of their conferences would come an agreement.

Only Briand Still in Power.

Now death has invaded the ranks of the three with Stresemann's unexpected death. Chamberlain, shattered in health, is out of power. Only Briand, who has survived more ups and downs than any statesman of modern history, remains in power, guiding the destinies of France and continuing his efforts for peace, even though somewhat out of tune with the sentiments of his country.

Stresemann was the typical German of the best type. The writer has vivid memories of him at teas at the foreign office, where, mingling with a democracy and freedom of a greater degree than even Washington officialdom knows, he would pass from group to group answering questions with a frankness that was startling. With a concise and exact mind no one had reason to ponder over what Stresemann was striving for in world affairs. There was no subtlety or indirection about him.

We See Him at Geneva.

At Geneva, after a trying day in the league or in conferences with foreign ministers or representatives of the powers, tired and worn, Stresemann would drift down to the Bavaria, a restaurant he loved and whose beer he liked. He would take a table out in front. He would down a big stein. The newspaper men would gather round and then Stresemann would talk. It was a liberal education. The cynical foreign correspondents regarded Stresemann as the most virile and forcible of the "Musketeers," giving Briand the palm in cleverness.

From the lower middle class, educated at great sacrifices on the part of his parents, Stresemann dug his way to a real education. He always was a student. He died still grasping for knowledge. One time an extreme Nationalist himself and during the war an ardent advocate of annexations and the "Deutschland Uber Alles" philosophy, Stresemann had judgment enough to recognize that the policy being pursued by the new republic was leading to destruction and ruin. Passive resistance in the Ruhr, for instance, might be embarrassing the allies immensely, as it was, but it was crushing Germany.

Overnight, upon coming to power, he changed the policy and sought rapprochement with France and Great Britain. The Locarno pact, then German entrance into the League of Nations, followed through the years. It was a tough, uphill fight, but Stresemann never deviated.

Germany hated the league as a pact of conquering nations. Stresemann had to pound into the head of an unwilling nation the theory that, by joining the league, there came for the first time recognition of Germany as an equal, not a conquered, power. Finally he won. Then he picked up the equally difficult task of getting the Allies off the Rhine by negotiation, keeping an impatient public at home calmed, pressing the limit upon France for action.

Then His Health Broke.

His health broke in these last months. He did not figure greatly in the recent reparations conference in Belgium, but everyone understood Stresemann's guiding hand was behind the moves of the German delegates.

Stresemann, if he had been in the United States, would have been an Old Guard Republican with a decided eastern complex. His governmental policy was buttressed upon the foundation stone that in industry and business lay Germany's future. Many of his foes used to charge that he simply was the mouthpiece of the manufacturers and business and through him German industry and business were ruling the nation. Perhaps this was true, at first. But if so, Stresemann grew bigger than the people who made him. In later years he was laying down the policy and the industrialists were accepting it, sometimes when they didn't like all its implications.

It was fundamental with him that Germany needed peace, both abroad and at home. And while he had little innate sympathy with the Socialists or the working classes, yet always he insisted they must be kept satisfied. Give them representation in government or whatever was necessary to keep peace. He was slowly swinging more and more from the Right to the Left, when death ended his stormy career of fighting for peace.

German history and even world history will accord this typical German a large place, for he contributed much to getting the infant republic off to a sound start.

TO MARSHALL IN 1930

CLINTON LOSES NEXT CONFERENCE BY THREE VOTES.

Bishop McMurry Reminds Southwest Missouri Methodists of the Wisdom of Concentrating Efforts on Central College.

Next year's conference of the M. E. church, South, for Southwest Missouri, will be at Marshall.

By a close vote Marshall won over Clinton today in the conference now in progress at Mt. Washington. Both cities made similar offers of entertainment—on the Harvard plan, which means free lodging and breakfasts for all delegates. Marshall received 56 votes and Clinton 53.

Today's program was devoted to the educational work of the church. In recent years the church has centered its activities on Central college at Fayette, Mo., having abandoned two or three smaller schools to do so.

The Rev. L. M. Starkey reported a present enrollment at Central of 1,012, as compared with 943 last year and 500 in 1923. Bishop W. F. McMurry, president of the college, affirmed the wisdom of the consolidation policy. He said the one school now had a greater enrollment than all the schools had before, that its equipment was improved and the scholastic standards higher.

Bishop McMurry introduced to the delegates Sam Meyer, a senior at Central college and president of the student body. Mr. Meyer reassured the delegates in their confidence in modern youth.

"Please do not form your opinions of modern youth," he pleaded, "from the nitwits who make themselves so noticeable on the streets. Remember the predominating element in youth is clean, clear-eyed and virile, and will take good care of the future of America."

Tonight the Ararat Shrine Chanters will put on a program for the delegates, beginning at 7:15 o'clock. Following that church missions will be discussed.

McManus to Trial October 15.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—George McManus, Broadway bookmaker, will go on trial for the murder of Arnold Rothstein, nationally known gambler, Tuesday, October 15. Judge Max S. Levine fixed the date of trial in general sessions today.

SPORTING COMMENT

A Cautiously Pitched Game Was That of Sheehan and Bell, Who Probably Will Be the Starting Hurlers in the First Game at Rochester—Kuhel Crossed the Rochester Defense With His Left Field Looper—Gerken Provided a Thrill and Tense Was the Ninth With Sheehan Mastering a Red Wing Who Was Trying to Get a Runner in From Second.

By The Star's Sports Editor.

TOM SHEEHAN and Herman Bell probably will be the starting hurlers in the fifth game of the series in Rochester Tuesday, October 8. Each pitched well in the series opener yesterday. It was Sheehan's lot to win, Bell's fate to lose. A break or two and it might have been the other way.

The breaks so-called were fairly evenly distributed in the barrier game. The Blues compiled their second inning run when a good throw by Brown might have erased the tally in the molding of a double play. The Red Wings gathered a run in the fourth only because Tucker slipped and fell flat while working his way under a Collins fly that should have been an easy catch instead of a triple it turned out to be.

THE deciding break—if break is what it should be called—was Joe Kuhel's looper over third in the tenth. Kuhel is rated a right field hitter and a large percentage of his hits through a season wend their path that way. However, Joe Kuhel is the kind of a hitter who is likely to hit any kind of a pitch anywhere.

Even so the Rochester defense was not expecting a toy fly to be dumped over the infield and out toward the left field foul line when Joey came to bat in the last of the tenth with a runner on first and one out. The defensive formation of the Red Wings was toward the right side of the field. Kuhel's dumpy fly was just the opposite, too measly for the third baseman or the shortstop to go back under and too close in for the left fielder to scamper in and catch.

Knothe scored all the way from first, but as his comrade crossed the plate Kuhel was pulling up at second, so Joe was given only a double. Frequently runners score from first on a double. Kuhel couldn't have made third—and didn't make it. Hence, only the double, even though his mate abase advanced three bases.

THE defensive play of both pennant winners seemed a trifle nervous, with the Red Wing play a bit more prankish than that of the Blues. Tucker's tumble under rather an easy fly was the only Blue miscue, although this doesn't appear in the box score.

The second inning error of third baseman Brown was a wide throw to second, made in the haste of trying for a double play that would kill a Blue run crossing the plate. Had the Brown throw been accurate the Red Wings would have won in nine innings. However, if that be the argument the Blues would have won in regulation time if Tucker hadn't flopped under the Collins fly.

A ROCHESTER slip that doesn't show in the box score was Sand's low throw of Spurgeon's bounder in the first inning. The play was scored a hit and as Spurgeon did not make second on the low peg no error was given. The ball was a high hopping bounder that came down slowly to Sands who figured he would have to hurry the throw to nip his man. That haste undoubtedly brought the low throw. On the theory that had the throw been good the play would have been close, the benefit of the doubt was given the batter and the hit scored. However, there is no one who can say that a good throw would not have stopped Spurgeon.

THAT the rival pennant winners are evenly matched the first game indicates. The Blues hardly will be given a better pitched game than Sheehan turned in. Yet it took them ten innings to win. On the other hand, the Red Wings hardly will trot out a hurler who will do better than Herman Bell yesterday.

Each pitcher worked carefully and cautiously, accounting in the main for the length of the playing time. Sheehan's control wasn't the best, although the five passes he wrote out may have been the result of a refusal to give feared hitters too fat a pitch to hit.

WATKINS, the clean-up hitter of the International League winners, gave first inning proof of why he hits fourth when he combed a long double to send a mate home. Again in the third Watkins hit, this time a clean single. However, Sheehan found a way to stop him thereafter, Watkins's last three appearances at the plate being without profit.

Tucker, fourth place hitter of the Blue offensive, was helpless in the hands of Herman Bell, so Blue patrons have the right to expect Ollie to break out in a hitting rash today. Grigsby, Peters,, Knothe and Kuhel slipped potent hits into the going and Gerken weaved two blows into scoring episodes.

THE game was snappily played and worthy of a far greater crowd. The Rochester team is snappy and dashy in appearance and play. The Blues will find these International Leaguers worthy foemen in the series. There was little to choose between the two in the first dash.

As the team faces a right-handed pitcher five of the regulars hit left-handed. This quintet almost comes in straight order, Toporcer, Southworth, Watkins and Collins. Each one is a base hit buster in his own right and Blue pitchers will work cautiously with them throughout the series.

THERE were tense moments in the series opener. In the third with the score knotted at 1-all, two outs and a runner on his journey around the path Gerken dashed in back of short to make a startling catch of Worthington's short fly. It looked like a run-scoring hit, but the centerfielder reached the ball's destination in time.

In the fourth, which Grigsby inaugurated with a single, he apparently caught Morrow, the Rochester catcher, by surprise, when he stole second on the first pitch to Gerken. The ball popped out of the catcher's glove so that Grigsby reached his objective without a peg to stop him.

The first of the ninth, with the count tied at 3 apiece, was plenty tense, when Brown rested on second after a double. Two were out, but the winning run was within reach of a single. Hearts of Blue loyalists were were high up as Sheehan worked carefully with Toporcer. The count grew to 3 and 1 and then 3 and 2, whereupon Toporcer fouled high back of the plate, and John Peters, after getting Umpire Goetz out of the way, established himself firmly under the ball and held to it for dear life.

TODAY Manager Southworth will pin his faith and hope in Carleton, the young right-hander, who hurled his way into baseball's gallery of fame a few weeks ago by winging a no-hit game. Against Carleton will be pitted the eccentric Mr. "Pea Ridge" Day from Arkansas, who has a habit of anointing the ball with a pitching substance that causes mist to gather in the eyes of opposing hitters. If Carleton is pitching in his proper tune and "Pea Ridge" Day warms to the going as well as he did in that game in Minneapolis three weeks ago, the customers will be witnesses to another post-season championship battle, with victory perching on the wings of the breaks as it did yesterday.

A "COMEBACK" FOR JACK.

Old Champion Still Is Able to "Pack 'em In."

(By the Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—That greatest gate attraction of ring history, Jack Dempsey, has sold himself to Chicago boxing fans as a promoter of fistic entertainment.

Making his bow as a promoter last night Dempsey, who never failed to give fans what they went to see, presented a card that sizzled with action. The historic Chicago Coliseum, scene of the old mauler's inaugural show, was not packed the way he used to pack them in, but 7,269 enthusiasts paid $31,574 to see Jackie Fields, world welterweight champion, forced to use everything he had to win a 10-round decision over Vince Dundee of Baltimore, brother of the boxer from whom Fields won his title last August.

Two other 10-rounders provided almost as much excitement. Dave Shade, ranked as the leading contender for the middleweight title, aided by superior experience and ring craft, gained a decision over Joe Roche, young San Francisco puncher, in the semifinal bout. The knockout element was provided by Haakon Hanson, Chicago middleweight slugger, who scored a technical knockout over Cowboy Dula of Fort Worth, Tex., in the sixth round of their 10-round bout.

AN ALL-AMERICAN "ROOKIE."

At 37, a Former Football Star Seeks Place on Badger Team.

MADISON, WIS., Oct. 3.—A 37-year-old war veteran, whom the later Walter Camp named on his 1918 all-American service football team, is a candidate for substitute end job of the University of Wisconsin team.

At an age when he might be expected to be sending in requests for seats between the 40-yard lines for big games, John Rassmussen of Oshkosh, Wis., married and the father of a 5-year-old son, is attempting to get into condition to help Glenn Thistlewaite's Badgers in their bid for the Big Ten championship.

Rassmussen played at Nebraska in 1915 and enrolled at Wisconsin in 1917, but left school to join the engineering corps when war was declared in April. He served overseas for twenty-nine months and played with the fourth division eleven in the A. E. F. tournament, and was named to an end position by Camp.

THE RED WINGS HAVE A FIRST BASING STAR IN RIP COLLINS.

Joey Kuhel has a worthy rival in this fine athlete, who holds down first base for Rochester. Not only is he a splendid fielder but his hitting is strong. He bats right-handed against southpaw pitching and left-handed against right-handed pitching and this makes him doubly formidable. He and Kuhel are considered among the outstanding first basemen in the minor leagues and both are ticketed for big league jobs. The picture shows Collins stretching for a wide one.

"ONE-SIDED" TO CUYLER

The Only Edge Given Macks Is in Pitching and the Southpaws Face a Handicap in the Series.

This is the first of three articles by Kiki Cuyler, star player of the Chicago Cubs, giving his opinion of their adversaries in the world series, the Athletics; of his own club, and then comparing both teams and predicting the result.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—That Philadelphia team of Connie Mack's must be powerful. Everybody who has seen those fellows play says so. I have never seen them, but I expect to know something about them before another week is out.

The impressive thing to me and to the other fellows on the Cubs is the way the Athletics tore through the American Leaguers, winning by a wide margin. But the more I think of it, the more I am convinced they didn't have such a tough struggle. They didn't have the battle to win the American League flag that we had to win in the National League.

There was only one team for them to beat—the Yankees. It is my impression that there wasn't another really strong team in the American League. So the Athletics had six comparatively easy teams to battle.

GREATER VICTORY FOR CUBS.

In contrast, we had three powerful teams to beat—Pirates, Giants and Cardinals. And the four others were not easy. The Phillies and Brooklyn were powerful outfits on attack. They were hard to stop. And Cincinnati and Boston were strong defensively. They had a lot of good pitchers. There wasn't an easy one in our league.

So I feel that the Cubs attained a greater victory in the pennant race than the A's. While it might appear from the season's doings that the Mackmen are stronger than the Cubs, I can't see it that way when consideration is given to opposition on each side. To me the Athletics appear a team with superior pitching, a great catcher, and an outfit with sufficient punch to make progress behind the good pitching. Without Bob Grove, Rube Walberg and George Earnshaw, the Mackmen, in my opinion, wouldn't have gone along very well. Without any one of those three it would have been tough for them.

HANDICAP TO MOUND ACES.

But, of course, they had Grove and Walberg and Earnshaw, and they still have them, as we are likely to find out in a way that will impress us maybe more than we like.

However, two of those three pitching stars are left-handers. We have a right-handed hitting team. Only one man in our line-up, Charley Grimm, hits left-handed. That doesn't mean, of course, that our right-handers will knock those left-handers flat, but it does look as if there was a percentage there in our favor. We ought to hit them and hit them hard.

Maybe Mr. Mack intends to surprise us by letting his left-handed stars sit on the bench and watch the series, and sending those veteran right-handers, Rommel and Quinn, against us. But I hardly expect it. Grove and Walberg rate too high to sit on the bench, even with the percentage against them.

As a hitting team I can't figure the A's as tough an aggregation as the Phillies, for instance, in the National League. I hardly think they can hit the Pirates or the Giants. Our pitchers faced those fellows with considerable success. Pittsburgh had it on us, but we beat the others.

HIGHER RATING IN INFIELD.

Of course we expect batting strength from a star like Al Simmons. We will be watching him closely. No doubt about it; he must be a real hitter. Apparently Foxx and Cochrane and Bing Miller are powerful with the bat. But we have been up against some pretty heavy hitters in our league, better, in my opinion, than the sluggers of the Athletics.

Looks to me, too, as if we will have the edge in the infield. Pretty hard to beat our infield for defense.

Summing it up, it looks to me as if the A's must depend upon good pitching to beat us, and two of their pitching stars are left-handers. We love left-handers.

SCORE ONE FOR MARRIAGE.

Matrons Hold Advantage in Women's Golf Tourney.

(By the Associated Press.)

DETROIT, Oct. 3.—Married women golfers had one good argument against the claim they were yielding to members of the single ranks today.

Of the eight survivors in the national women's championship at Oakland Hills six of them are married. They are Mrs. Harley Higbie, Detroit; Mrs. O. S. Hill, Kansas City; Mrs. Leo Federman, New York; Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, Philadelphia, and Mrs. Leona Pressler, Los Angeles. The unmarried survivors are Glenna Collett, the defending title holder from Pebble Beach, Cal., and Bernice Wall of Oshkosh, Wis.

One of Russia's greatest problems today is that her production, both industrial and food, cannot meet the demands of her population.

WELL, we knew the Blues would win all the time. There never was any question in what we humorously refer to as our mind, especially after that hit by Joey Kuhel dropped inside the foul line.

A few days ago "Long Tom" Sheehan, the most argumentative cuss in baseball, remarked he thought he had at least one strong game in his system and he wanted to save it for the Junior Series. That strong game was the one he pitched yesterday, and it rather refutes the thought among some of the followers that this fellow is nearing the end of his pitching rope.

Now that he has appeared in the series and turned in a stunning victory Long Tom can be counted upon to fill the golf courses of California this winter with his discussion of the contest.

"That reminds me of that first game of the series in Kansas City when them Red Wings had us beat by a run and that bird was up at the plate with a runner on second and——"

Or as Tom tees up the ball out in sunny California and swishes his driver preparatory to knocking the ball several hundred yards he will pause just before addressing the pellet and say:

"I wonder if you birds heard me tell about that tenth inning of that first game with Rochester. You see we get a man on first, but that little pest, Spurgeon, fouls out. I am sitting on the bench hoping this is the last inning, because I can't go on indefinitely holding back them Red Wings. Well, boys, we got a first baseman on that team which is a sweetheart, and what does he do but get one of them curving hits in left and, boys, the game is over and I sighs with relief on the bench."

Or, as Tom takes out his mashie-niblick and eyes the green some hundred yards away, he says, first:

"The only thing that made me sore in that first game in Kansas City was that time I took a perfect strike right down the alley. I mighta knocked that ball outta the park and we had a man on base. I was so mad at myself I could have tore up the dugout but I decided to keep on pitching the best I knew how and everything would come out all right."

And then after the rounds of golf next winter in funny California while the others are in the locker room telling about how they almost had a ninety if they hadn't missed a 1-foot putt or lost six drives in the rough or knocked four in the water, Tom will say, having nonchalantly negotiated the eighteen holes in something like 78:

"Well, I work the count to three and two on that batter in the fourth inning of that first game in Kansas City and I knowed I had to come in with that next pitch. And—"

Then somebody will take out his mashie and, with one swipe, bring down Long Tom. Yep, that's exactly what will happen.

Boswell's Life of Pea Ridge Day—

His first name is Clyde, but he was born in Pea Ridge, Ark., and for some unaccountable reason they call him Pea Ridge Day.

His mates like to see him win, but they hate to listen to him in the clubhouse after the game is over.

It is said he is cuckoo, but this may only be a rumor.

He can holler. E. M.

A CUB INFIELD "EDGE"

BUT THERE ARE SOME "IFS" IN FIGURES FOR SERIES.

(By the Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The last time the Athletics and Cubs met in the world's series, nineteen years ago, they presented two of the greatest infield combinations of all time. Time has enhanced rather than dimmed the fame of Tinker-Evers-Chance double-play trio and the famous Davis-Collins-Barry-Baker quartet of 1910.

Neither of the infields that take their positions at Wrigley Field next Tuesday compares as a whole with those of ancient arrays. From an individual standpoint, however, the Cubs have one of the greatest performers of all time in Rogers Hornsby, while the Athletics have a great youngster in Jimmy Foxx. Frank Baker was the home run hero of his day and Chance a slugger, but neither had anything like the batting punch of Hornsby and Foxx.

SOME "IFS" IN FIGURES.

"If" Charley Grimm, the Cub field captain, is recovered sufficiently from a broken left wrist to be back at top form, Joe McCarthy's infield troupe figures to have a slight defensive edge on their Mack rivals, as well as a margin in hitting strength.

"If" the double-play figures mean anything the Cubs have a more effective combination, for they have registered over 160 twin killings as compared to around 115 for the Athletics. At bat the Cub infielders have an advantage of about ten points to the man with Foxx and Dykes, Hornsby and English topping their rivals by substantial margins.

Foxx is a much more dangerous batsman than Grimm, but the Cub captain is a consistent hitter, a more finished fielder and more experienced. Grimm was signed by Connie Mack when he was a youngster of 17 back in 1916, but he never got a trial with the As. This is his twelfth big league season and Foxx's fifth.

BIG EDGE AT SECOND.

Max Bishop, the slender Mack second batsman, has a habit of rising to the occasion. He might turn out to be a series hero, but his record cannot compare with that of his great rival, Hornsby. Bishop may be a better man at going back after pop flies, but Hornsby has had a great year in the field as well as at bat. His batting mark is 140 points better than Bishop's, and his experience is a vital Cub asset.

Joe Boley, out of the game a good part of the season, is a smoother-working shortstop than the 22-year-old Elwood English, but not so good a hitter. The versatile Jimmy Dykes, who can play any infield position acceptably, gives the A's a distinct edge at third base. Norman McMillan is fast, and he has filled a spot that gives the Cubs a lot of early worry, but the ex-Yankee is not as seasoned or as dangerous a hitter as Dykes.

FIRST TIME FOR BARONS.

Birmingham Is Winner of the Dixie Series.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Oct. 3.—The Birmingham Barons today sat atop the heap of baseball teams that cavort over Southern diamonds.

The Barons, pennant winners in the Southern Association, won the Dixie series from Dallas of the Texas League by taking yesterday's game here 7 to 5. It was the sixth of the series, and the fourth win for the locals.

If words were deeds, there will never be a war again.

THE BIG SIX LINES UP

FOUR TEAMS GO INTO ACTION THIS WEEK-END.

Missouri and Oklahoma Prepare to Continue Tuning Up in Games Saturday With Freshmen Teams.

(By the Associated Press.)

MANHATTAN, KAS., Oct. 3.—A squad of thirty-one Kansas Aggie football players will make the trip to Lafayette, Ind., this week-end for the opening game of the season Saturday with Purdue. A long drill on punting yesterday and a light practice this morning completed the preparation. Lud Fiser, halfback, suffered a smashed nose in yesterday's workout, but will go East anyway. The squad was to entrain this afternoon.

NORMAN, OK., Oct. 3.—Light, dummy scrimmage sufficed for Oklahoma regulars yesterday, while Ad Lindsay peered intently at the work of the reserves against the frosh in an effort to find men to replace the injured Churchill and Muldrow. The varsity will engage in the annual freshman game this Saturday.

LAWRENCE, KAS., Oct. 3.—Kansas will advance on Illinois Saturday with its full strength. The final polishing for the game was held yesterday, but a limbering up drill was scheduled before departure today.

COLUMBIA, MO., Oct. 3.—Forward passing practice and scrimmage with the freshmen they will meet Saturday in the annual game, occupied Missouri varsity men yesterday, Kern Reece, big fullback, who seems relentlessly pursued by injuries, is impatiently awaiting the time he can don a uniform again.

LINCOLN, NEB., Oct. 3.—Apparently the Nebraska squad could be in no worse shape to open the season. Sloan, Rowley, Witte and Scheringer, first string backs, are nursing injuries. In practice against the freshmen yesterday the varsity played unsatisfactory football. Reserve backs may start Saturday against Southern Methodist university. The Texas team is expected to arrive late Friday for a workout.

AMES, IA., Oct. 3.—The eligibility list handed out at Iowa state yesterday showed every member of the football squad eligible for the opener with Grinnell Saturday. Drill on signals comprised the afternoon workout.

MISS COLLETT TRAILING.

Mrs. Harley Higbie Leads Champion, 2 up at Ninth.

(By the Associated Press.)

Bulletin.

OAKLAND HILLS COUNTRY CLUB, BIRMINGHAM, MICH., Oct. 3.—Mrs. Harley Higbie of Detroit led Glenna Collett of Pebble Beach, Cal., the defending champion, 2 up at the end of the first nine holes of their quarter final match in the women's national golf tournament today.

Miserable putting by the champion gave the Detroiter a 3-up lead on the fourth. Both were three feet off the pin with their thirds, but Miss Collett missed her's, while Mrs. Higbie sank it for a birdie 4. They were both in a trap on the 417-yard fifth and halved it with par 5s. A spectacular blast out of a trap and a 11-foot putt enabled Mrs. Higbie to halve the sixth in par 4 and remain 3 up.

Mrs. O. S. Hill of Kansas City shot a 37, four under par, on the first nine holes, to take a two up margin over Mrs. Stewart Hanley of Detroit.

Mrs. Hill, present western champion, won the second, third and eighth holes, Mrs. Hanley took the 430-yard ninth and the others were halved. The Detroit woman was shooting great golf, too, turning the bend with a 39, two under par.

Par, out	553	554	554—41
Hill, out	553	454	443—37
Hanley out	364	444	453—39

NAMES THE K. U. SQUAD.

Twenty-Five Players Will Make Trip to Illinois.

(By The Star's Own Service.)

LAWRENCE, KAS., Oct. 3.—Twenty-five University of Kansas football players were named by Coach H. W. "Bill" Hargiss today to pack up their kit bags for the trip to Champaign, Ill., where they will do battle in the opening game of the season Saturday against the University of Illinois eleven.

The Jayhawkers will take a light workout here this afternoon and entrain for Kansas City to catch a Chicago & Alton train east at 8:20 o'clock tonight. They will arrive at Champaign Friday noon and work out there in the afternoon.

The squad taken east includes fifteen letter men and ten sophomores. The men named for the trip:

Officials for the Kansas-Illinois game were announced today as follows: John C. Grover, Kansas City, referee; A. Haines, umpire; C. E. McBride, Kansas City, field judge; Lyle Clarno, head linesman.

DEKUH IS STILL HERE.

Report That Italian Fighter Is Missing Unfounded.

A stir was created in the downtown hotel home of Arthur DeKuh when the giant Italian fighter failed to respond to a 6 o'clock call this morning and a bellboy who was sent up to awaken him reported to the clerk that his room was empty.

It appeared that foul play had occurred. The clerk recalled that DeKuh had retired at 10. No one had seen him go out since that time. The clerk immediately reported to Victor Bonnasin, DeKuh's trainer, that the fighter was missing. Bonnasin was as mystified as the others and called John O'Brien, DeKuh's manager, intending the latter should inform the police department of the disappearance.

But O'Brien was able to clear up the mystery. It seems that DeKuh complained to the manager of the hotel yesterday that the noise of a street repairing crew outside his window had kept him awake the night before. The hotel man assigned Arturo to another room in the hotel and neglected to indicate the change on the guest rack or tell his employees about it and DeKuh was equally non-committal, excepting to O'Brien.

COLONELS UP FOR SALE

W. F. KNEBELKAMP TO RETIRE BECAUSE OF HEALTH.

Name of the Prospective Purchaser Is Withheld by Owner of the Louisville Club Since 1922.

LOUISVILLE, KY., Oct. 3.—William F. Knebelkamp, owner of the Louisville baseball club, has announced he is on the verge of selling the team. He declined to reveal the name of the prospective purchaser.

Mr. Knebelkamp says the sale of the Colonels is being prompted by his failing health and by the pressure of other business enterprises which are more profitable.

Mr. Knebelkamp became president of the Louisville club in 1919. In 1922 he bought the controlling interest in the organization from Otho Wathen. Mr. Knebelkamp's first manager was Patsy Flaherty, who resigned in July of the 1919 season. Joe McCarthy was appointed to succeed Flaherty two minutes after Flaherty had startled the business office by submitting his resignation.

McCarthy moved over to the management of the Chicago Cubs in 1926 and Bill Meyer succeeded him. The Colonels have won three pennants for Mr. Knebelkamp, the gala years being 1921, 1925 and 1926.

MAJORS MAY USE PLANES.

Future Will Find Teams Transported in Air, Says Evans.

(By the Associated Press.)

CLEVELAND, Oct. 3.—The major baseball leagues of the future will transport their teams in airplanes, and may revise their circuits to include one or two Pacific Coast cities, believes Billy Evans, general manager of the Cleveland Indians.

Last Night's Fight Results.

San Francisco—Wesley Ketchell, Portland, Ore., knocked out "Winks" Jenkins, Denver (1).

As a general rule, women live longer than men. Woman has less muscularity than man, but, being designed for motherhood, she has more vitality.

THE A'S SHOW "NERVES"

ENFORCED IDLENESS DOES NOT AGREE WITH TEAM.

With Rain Twice Stopping Games With Washington, Athletics Now Have Only Two Tuning-Up Engagements.

(By the Associated Press.)

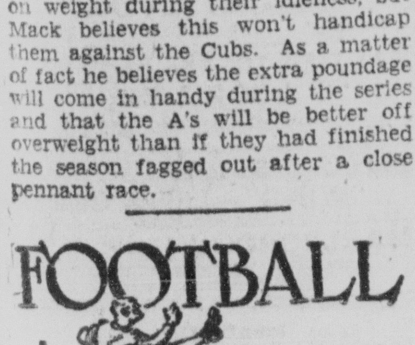
PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 3.—The champion Athletics are becoming somewhat irritable waiting for the rain clouds to roll by. A soggy ball park twice postponed their double-header here with Washington, and yesterday, with no sign of clearing weather, the games were tossed out of the schedule for good. The champions craved work, but didn't get it.

Connie Mack had hoped to have all his regulars in action and bearing down on the Senators as a part of the tuning-up process for the big series with the Cubs, but rain spoiled his plans. Games with the Yankees in New York Saturday and Sunday will furnish the Mackmen their only chances now of getting some real competition before the series opens in Chicago next Tuesday.

The Athletics haven't even gone through the motions of playing ball since Sunday, and loafing at this time doesn't appeal to them. The monotony of hanging around their homes and hotels has been varied by playing golf, but none of them regards it as a satisfying substitute for baseball. Foxx, Simmons, Cochrane, Hale, Perkins and Summa are keen golfers and get out on the links at every opportunity.

A group of pitchers headed by Bill Shores takes in two or three movies a day, and sedate young men like Dykes, Bishop and Boley spend leisure time watching the stock market reports.

Some of the regulars have taken on weight during their idleness, but Mack believes this won't handicap them against the Cubs. As a matter of fact he believes the extra poundage will come in handy during the series and that the A's will be better off overweight than if they had finished the season fagged out after a close pennant race.



THE ideal football team? Through experience, "Toddy" Newman at Westport high has found a combination of temperaments conducive to successful seasons. Here's what Newman has to say on the subject:

"A good football team needs as a base a majority of steady, consistent pluggers who are in there trying day after day, game after game. Their style seldom varies except for an occasional slump, from which no athlete is immune.

"The extra touch is added to the successful team by the temperamental type of athlete. He is up and down, playing miserably at times and then following with a game or two away above his head. When something out of the ordinary is required, he is the boy to do it, as he can easily be inspired to rise to heights and that sort of thing. Of course, when things are going badly with the temperamental athletes, the burden rests with the consistent pluggers, but the former is an asset to any team."

Newman believes that abusive language has no place in the high school football coaches' vocabulary these days. The hardboiled, caustic "bawling out," so popular a few years ago among high school coaches, has given way to moderation to such an extent that greater results are obtained from suggesting rather than commanding. Sarcasm is assiduously avoided these days for fear of a complete loss of ambition on the part of the young star.

According to Newman, different methods must be employed on different athletes. Primarily, however, the confidence of the squad is the coach's aim. He must not be too gentle, though, or the boys will lose their respect for him.

An occasional compliment or word of cheer from the mentor will keep a team in a peppy, serious mood throughout an afternoon's practice, Newman believes.

The second team interscholastic loop will get under way October 7. As is customary, the second teams will play the same league schedule as their more finished brothers. The games will be played on Monday afternoons.

A GOOD BLADE NEEDS NO APOLOGY

She . . . "Heavens, your face feels like sand paper! Really, you should shave every day."
He . . . "I do, dear. But I was nervous this morning."

A Hint for Wives

If your husband is irritable at breakfast, don't despair of his disposition. Possibly he's had another one of these irritating shaves that starts a man's day all wrong. He's suffering from the bad blade habit. You can smooth out his disposition—smooth his cheeks—and rescue his smile.

A good blade needs no apology. Get him to try Gem Blades. When he sees his whiskers depart without a tug or tussle, prepare for a celebration!... Genuine Gem Blades give better shaves—more shaves. Sold by all dealers. We'll refund your money, if our hint fails.

HEIRS OF FAMOUS TREE

The D. A. R. Will Place One on the Memorial Highway Between Washington and Mt. Vernon in 1932 Celebration.

WASHINGTON BUREAU
THE KANSAS CITY STAR
610 ALBEE BUILDING

(By a Member of The Star's Staff.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The Daughters of the American Revolution, through Mrs. James H. Dorsey of Maryland, will place a "grandchild seedling" of the famous Washington Elm that stood at Cambridge, Mass., on the memorial highway from the nation's capital to Mt. Vernon in the 1932 celebration in honor of Washington's birthday.

The gift has been accepted by those having the building of the memorial highway in charge. The seedling offered by Mrs. Dorsey is listed in the hall of fame of the American Tree Association. There are two at the tomb at Mt. Vernon and another is in the grounds of the governor's house at Annapolis.

Nearly forty years ago an uncle of Mrs. Dorsey brought from Cambridge a handful of seeds he had scooped up through the iron fence around the old tree. On planting them in his Maryland garden some of them grew. One went to the governor's mansion yard at Annapolis and others to Mt. Vernon, a fourth to another uncle's yard.

Three years ago Mrs. Dorsey took the grandchild seedling to her home in Baltimore with quite a bundle of the little tiny trees that were springing up around the roots of this particular "child" of the old Washington elm, which had fallen three or four years before. Mrs. Dorsey has nursed and cared for these little "grandchildren" with the result that she has three or four very healthy little youngsters. Two have grown so rapidly they are now nearly fifteen feet tall.

One has been given to Valley Forge and is planted in front of the Memorial church. One went to Washington college at Chestertown, on the eastern shore of Maryland, named for Washington, with his express consent, and visited by him when he received an honorary degree. Another is thriving in the grounds of the Daughters of the American Revolution Memorial Continental hall in Washington, and still another is in the yard of the Sons of the American Revolution in Sixteenth street in Washington.

Plans are under way in many sections of the country for memorial tree planting incident to the Washington celebration here in 1932, according to reports from the American Tree Association.

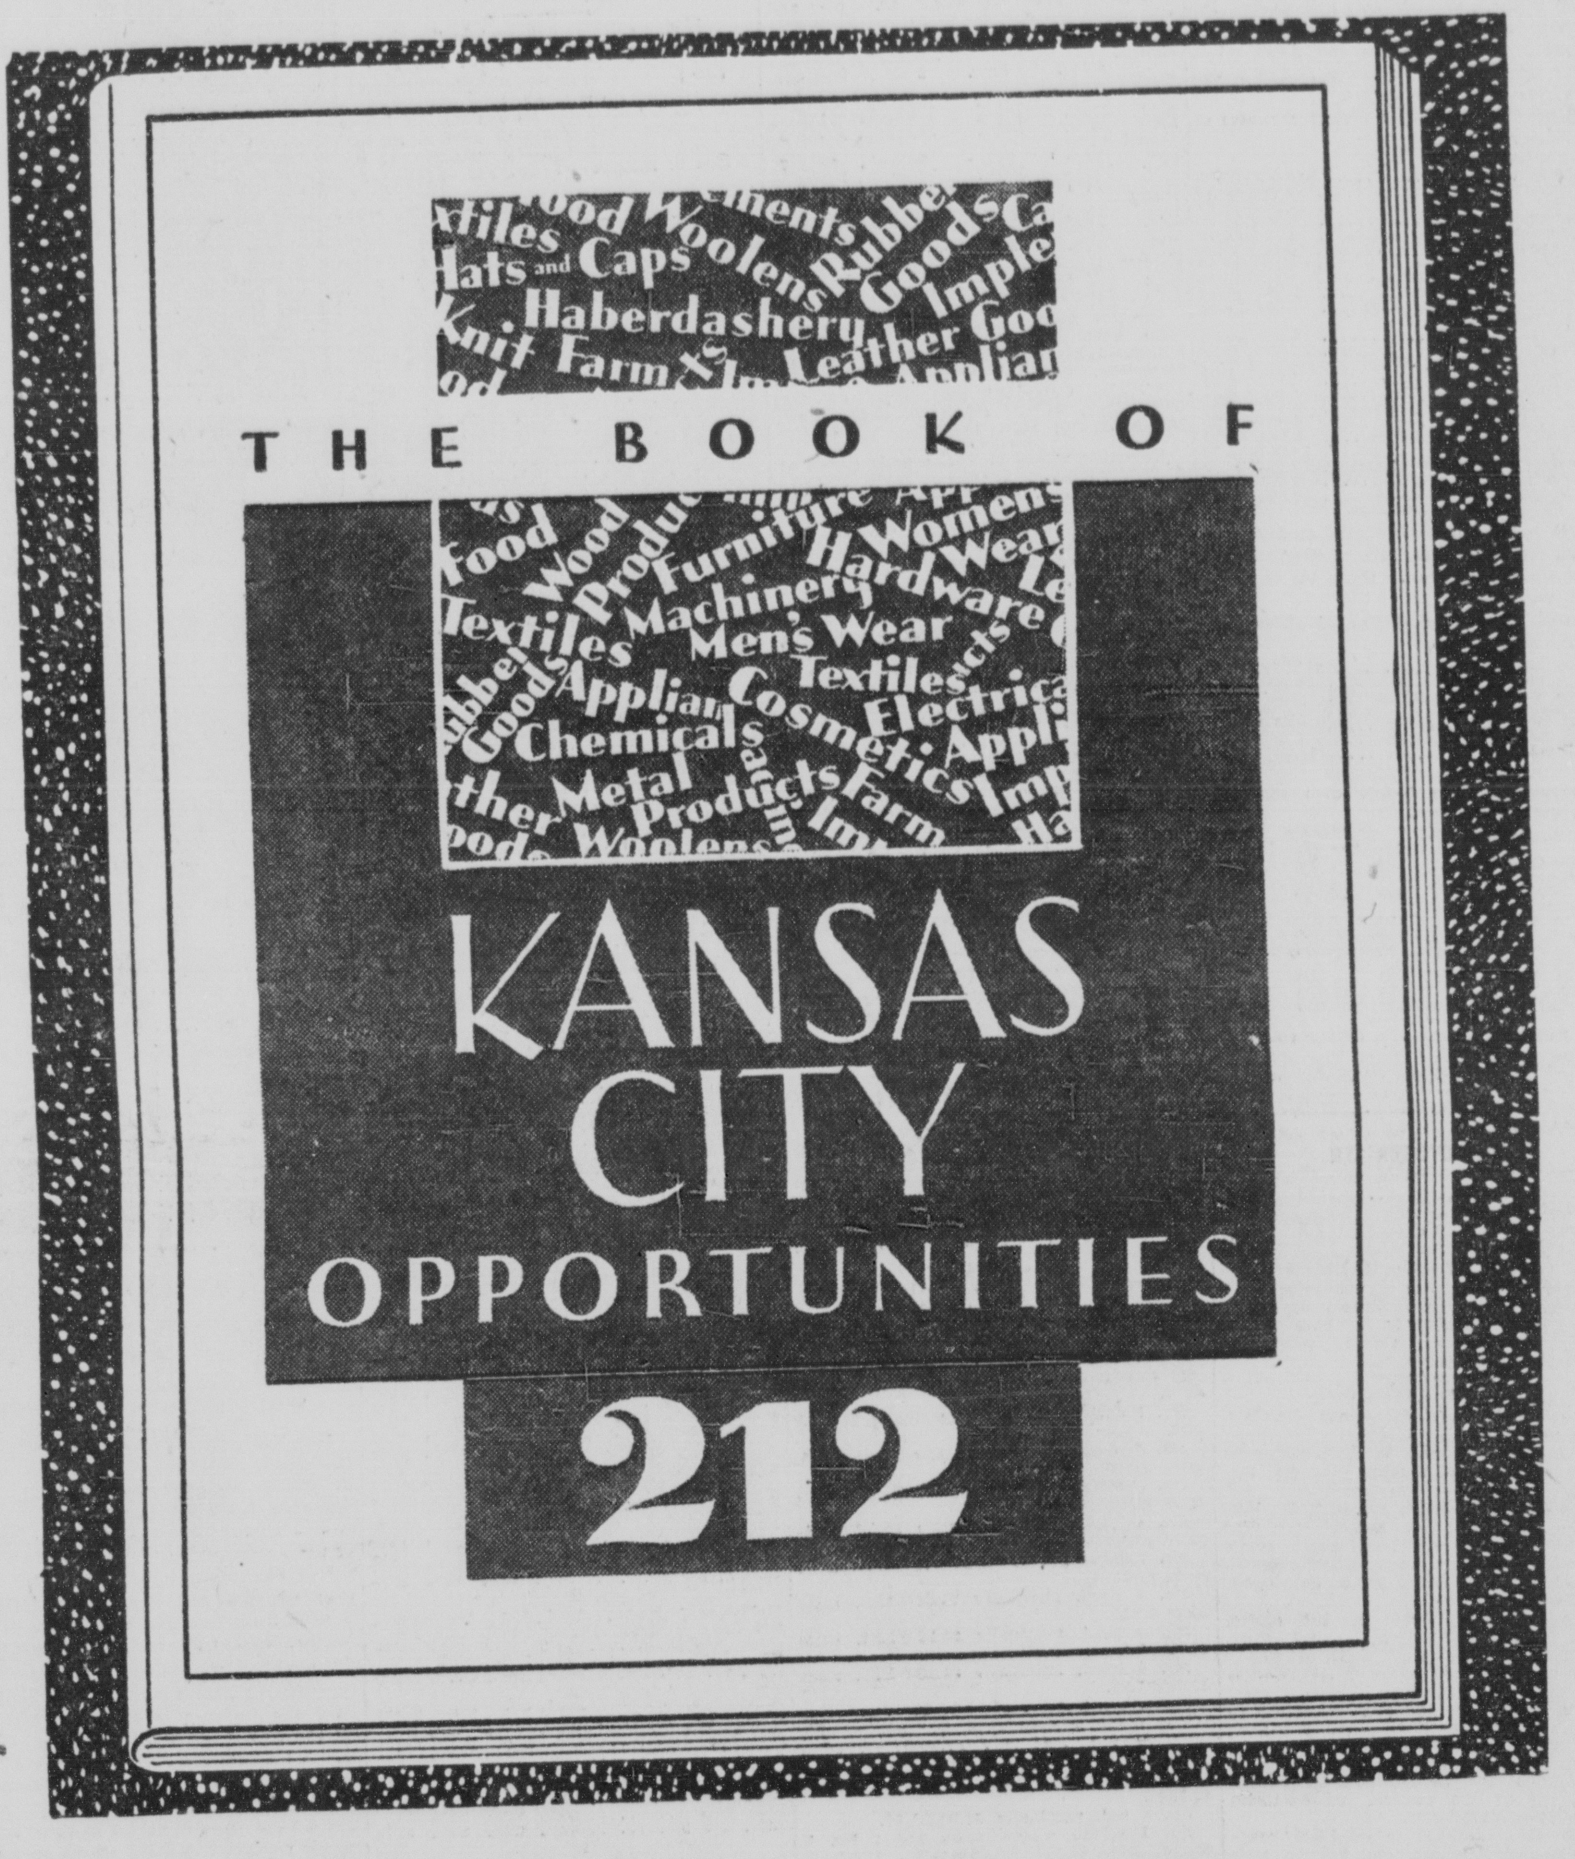
THE BOOK OF KANSAS CITY OPPORTUNITIES

. . . an Invitation to the Nation's Industries



JUST published by the Industrial Department of the Chamber of Commerce is a significant booklet that will have wide distribution to executives of the nation's industries.

It is "The Book of Kansas City Opportunities," a concise publication setting forth the 212 manufacturing opportunities that provide an existing market for local production. These 212 products Kansas City buys today from distant markets . . . yet they can be manufactured profitably here.

Facts tell this story, facts gathered in a thorough survey made recently by the Industrial Department among all of Kansas City's manufacturers.

Kansas City grows steadily, soundly. Within the last year the city has had its greatest industrial growth, in new industries and in the expansion of existing producers. Yet the city is just on the threshold of industrial opportunity.

To speed that day, to bring about a more balanced industrial growth, the Chamber of Commerce is advertising to business executives these opportunities of profit and growth. That advertising is developing steadily increasing interest and inquiry.

Kansas City grows!

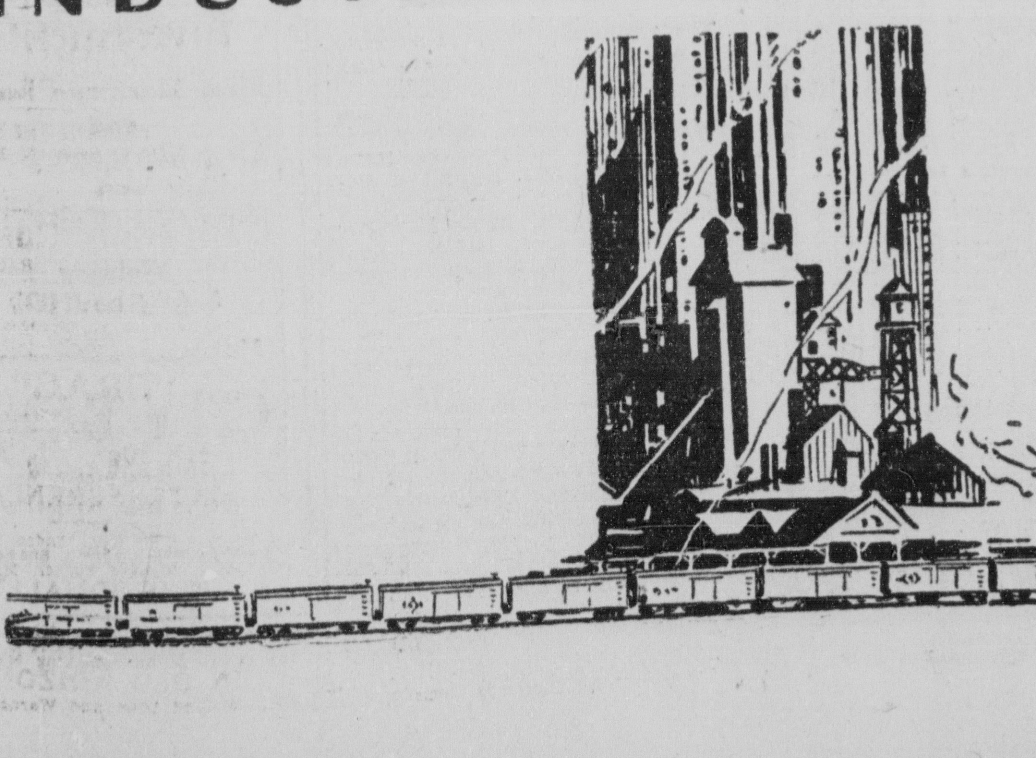
INDUSTRIAL COMMITTEE OF THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE



KANSAS CITY

MISSOURI

Kansas City is truly the city of opportunity. In 212 lines of business Kansas City affords a market that today must be supplied from other cities ... yet PROFITABLE MANUFACTURE could be undertaken here. Seeking aggressive manufacturers to take advantage of these opportunities, the Industrial Committee of the Chamber of Commerce is hopeful of aiding in bringing to Kansas City its deserved industrial supremacy.

THE LATEST MARKET NEWS

HOG PRICES HIGHER AGAIN.

Shippers paid 15 to 25 cents advance for the bulk of the desirable butcher hogs averaging 240 pounds and down at the Kansas City stockyards today. But, despite reduced receipts, packers were slow to take hold of the heaviest offerings. The close was steady to 10 cents net higher on kinds averaging above 240 pounds.

Packing sows were stronger at $7 to $8, and pigs steady at $8 to $9.

Average price of hogs at Kansas City Wednesday was $9.26, average weight 218 pounds; Chicago, $9.38, weight 252 pounds; Omaha, $8.48, weight 277 pounds.

Heavy weights, good to choice	$ 9.00@ 9.60
Heavy weights, 300 pounds up	8.35@ 9.10
Medium weights, good to choice	9.75@10.00
Medium weights, com. to med.	9.25@ 9.75
Light weights, good to choice	9.25@10.00
Light lights, 130 to 160 pounds	9.00@ 9.85
Packing sows	6.75@ 8.10
Stocker and feeder pigs	7.50@ 9.00
Bulk of sales	9.25@ 9.95

Choice 1,182-pound Missouri fed steers brought the top at $14.75. Good to choice native fed steers sold mainly around $12.50 to $13.75, wintered and fed grassers at $10.50 to $12, and common to medium straight grass steers at $7.50 to $9.50.

Cows lacked quality, grass fat offerings selling mainly at $6.50 to $7.25. Grass fat heifers brought $7.50 to $9.50. Canner and cutter cows sold at $4.75 to $6.

A few selected veal calves reached $12.50 and $13, but the bulk sold at $12 and down.

Shipments of cattle last night exceeded yesterday's actual receipts of 6,158 cattle. Most of them were stockers and feeders, but traders still reported a carry-over this morning of 10,500 cattle and 3,400 calves from previous days this week. Trade was slow, and prices unchanged.

Beef steers—
Fancy	$16.00@16.50
Choice	13.75@15.50
Good	11.50@14.00
Medium	8.75@11.75

Bulls, good to choice	8.00@ 9.25
Bulls, canners and bolognas	5.75@ 8.00
Vealer calves	8.00@13.00
Weighty slaughter calves	5.50@10.50
Fleshy feeders	11.00@12.75
Feeder steers	7.50@11.50
Stocker steers	6.00@12.50
Stocker and feeder calves	8.50@13.50

Best range lambs were sold at $12.25, a strong price, but other sales at $11.75 to $12 were steady to weak. Ewes at $4.60 to $5.15 were steady.

Range lambs	$11.25@12.25
Native lambs	10.00@11.75
Lambs, culls and common	8.00@10.00

LITTLE CHANGE IN COTTON.

New York, Oct. 3.—Cotton futures moved narrowly this morning around yesterday's closing prices, rallying 8 to 10 points to 18.95 for December and 19.25 for March, but the gain was lost in the later dealings.

Two private crop reports were issued, one placing the condition at 52.8 and the indicated yield at 14,692,000 bales, and the other 54.8 and 14,833,000 bales.

WHEAT DOWN 2 TO 2½ CENTS.

Reports of increasing congestion at Canadian terminals and pressure of Argentine grain abroad imparted decided weakness to wheat futures this morning.

The close was near the low level, down about 2 to 2½ cents for the day. Most of the decline occurred in the late dealings.

Export demand for North American wheat was moderate yesterday, with sales of about ½ million bushels reported, mostly Manitobas. Cables said there was less pressure from Argentine wheats in Continental markets and a good demand for North American wheat might develop soon.

Receipts of wheat at Kansas City were moderate, 125 cars, a decrease of 55 cars from a week ago and a year ago. Arrivals at the spring wheat markets were relatively light.

Corn futures displayed a somewhat stronger tone at the outset, responding to a better cash demand at most markets. Prices advanced ⅜ to ⅝ cent, followed by a setback in sympathy with wheat. The close was down ⅜ to ¾ cent for the day.

Receipts of corn were moderate at most markets. Kansas City had 22 cars, St. Louis 57 cars and inspections at Chicago were estimated at 133 cars.

MODERATE LOSSES IN STOCKS.

New York, Oct. 3.—The unexpectedly large decrease in the monthly statement of brokers' loans, announced yesterday afternoon, imparted weakness to most groups of stocks this morning. Volume of trade continued moderate.

Commercial Solvents dropped about 20 points, International Combustion Engineering lost 3⅜, American Water Works 2½, American Can 2, Allied Chemical 2½, Westinghouse Electric 3⅛, United Aircraft 3, Montgomery Ward 4⅜, General Electric 3¾, Electric Auto-Lite 5, Du Pont 3, Eastman 4⅜, Grigsby-Grunow 3⅜, Industrial Rayon 4¾, Simmons 5⅛, International Harvester 3, Johns-Manville 3 and United States Steel about 2.

Other losses ranging down to a point or so were numerous and included some of the oil, motor and copper issues.

In the rail group, Atchison, Canadian Pacific, Lackawanna, Reading, Pennsylvania, M.-K.-T. and New York Central lost about 1 to 2 points.

A few of the industrials made substantial gains. Columbian Carbon rose 13½, General Asphalt 2¼, National Lead 4 and American Telephone 1½.

Many of the losses were extended in the afternoon. United States Steel sold down nearly 6 points, Montgomery Ward 5¾, Industrial Alcohol 5, American Telephone 7¼, American Can 5¼ and Atchison about 6. The close generally was weak.

Call loans renewed at 7½ per cent and dropped to 6 in the afternoon.

Transactions in the first half hour were 415,000 shares; to noon, 1,481,000; to 1:30 p. m., 2,682,000; to 2:10 p. m., 3,149,000; total, about 4,200,000 shares; bonds, about 9 million dollars.

[Later editions will contain the closing prices, not available for this edition.]

The range of prices for the leading issues on the New York Exchange at 2 p. m. today and the closing prices yesterday, as reported by McGreevy & Co., are as follows:

WALL STREET COMMENT.

New York, Oct. 3.—Monthly statement of the stock exchange, showing the amount of money borrowed on collateral by its members, furnished another surprise when it was published yesterday, after the close of the market. The increase in September, nearly 668 million dollars, was the largest ever reported for any month. In four months there has been an increase of 1,884 million, and the total, 8,549 million, is 2,670 million more than a year ago. The September increase was 200 million more than the increase in four weeks reported by the New York Federal Reserve member banks, indicating a continuing flow of funds to Wall street from sources outside the banks that regularly handle such credits. These huge loans represent in large measure money borrowed to carry stocks on margins for customers and indicate that investors who own stocks outright have been selling to operators who have to borrow money to pay for such stocks. It is significant that the September increase in brokers' loans occurred in the face of a declining market, something that never has occurred before. Usually declining prices mean liquidation by speculators and reduction of loans.

"The looked-for period of readjustment in the aircraft industry has arrived, and even leading manufacturing units are being affected adversely by excessive production facilities," says Standard Statistics. "Many smaller units operating at a loss probably will be forced into liquidation in coming months. The year's output of airplanes probably will not exceed 6,500, in contrast with first-of-the-year estimates of 12,000."

New York state received more than 4 million dollars last month from the sale of stock-transfer tax stamps, chiefly from stock exchange firms.

National Automobile Chamber of Commerce estimates that 417,000 motor cars were produced last month, compared with 513,843 in August and 436,507 in September last year. For nine months production was 4,828,000 cars, compared with 3,672,869 in the same period last year. Total 1928 production was 4,601,103 cars. It is evident that this year's production will exceed 5½ million, a million more than in 1928. The big decline that has occurred in prices of shares of automobile companies indicates that much doubt exists as to whether this big production can be kept up.

FOREIGN BANK STATEMENTS.

New York, Oct. 3.—Bank of England statement, received by cable this morning, shows a decrease of 14 million dollars in gold, making the total 624 million, nearly 200 million less than a year ago. Reserve ratio is 24.11 per cent, compared with 29.73 a week ago and 47.10 a year ago. Discount rate was unchanged at 6½ per cent.

Bank of France reported an increase of about 14 million dollars in gold, with a total of about 1,574 million dollars. Circulation increased 1,321 million francs; bills discounted increase 1,335 million francs. Discount rate was unchanged at 3½ per cent.

SEARS ROEBUCK SALES.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—September sales of Sears Roebuck Company were $36,950,342, compared with $30,004,372 in September, 1928; in nine months, 298 million dollars.

HIGH MONEY TO REMAIN

DECLINE NOT EXPECTED UNTIL NEXT YEAR.

A Letup in Business Activity and Trade in Securities Must Precede Lower Interest Rates—Reserve Position Strong.

By John F. Sinclair.

(Brookmire Economic Service Co-operating.)

New York, Oct. 3.—Money conditions show no sign as yet of important relaxation, bankers say. After a prolonged period of stringency there usually is no real or sustained relaxation until some time after business operations and security dealings have begun to decline. Seasonal factors in commerce and the present large demand for credit from the stock market will prevent any easing in open market money rates during the rest of this year. Some time after the turn of the year demand for money may decline and rates, accordingly, relax.

The advance in the English bank rate on September 26 to 6½ per cent is a constructive step, in that it serves notice finally that the government will not be responsible for allowing actual depletion of the Bank of England's reserve. Nevertheless, it must be recognized that this is an emergency measure.

WORLD CREDIT STRINGENCY.

Before England will be "out of the woods" it will be necessary to force a reversal of the gold flow, bringing more of the metal into the bank's coffers, and the seasonal pressure on sterling exchange is just beginning. The underlying significance is that England will take whatever steps may be required to stop the outflow of funds. This means stringency abroad—smaller demand for American goods, less money to be utilized in American security markets, and eventually a drain on our gold supplies. A certain degree of world-wide credit restriction is foreshadowed.

This monetary situation, placing a burden on those industries which have to raise capital through borrowing and upon those countries whose purchasing power is to a considerable extent dependent upon foreign exchange rates, is unfavorable to business expansion. Basically, however, domestic money conditions have improved in the past year in this country, as gold reserves have increased materially and federal reserve ratio has risen once more to around 75 per cent. It is entirely possible to exaggerate the extent of the surplus reserves available, especially with the impending reversal of the flow of gold imports, but there is no question that the federal reserve position is very strong.

A CHANGE DUE NEXT YEAR.

It is probable, therefore, that things will work out about as follows: Money conditions will remain tight, loan capital scarce, and bonds dull for the rest of this year. Some time next year, probably in the early months, money rates will ease, owing to receding business activity and, therefore, smaller demand for funds. This will enable the member banks to reduce indebtedness at the reserve banks, and the latter in the early stages of the recession will be likely to put funds voluntarily at the disposal of the banks through open market operations. In the past several years, the reserve has helped to prevent serious depressions by just such action. They will probably follow such course in future unless hampered by excessive speculation and rapid expansion of brokers' loans.

Assuming that stock market activity will tend to diminish in coming months, easier money conditions will be possible. On the basis of industrial outlook we should expect a period of readjustment in the market with downward movements in some groups and advances in others. Without anticipating an old-fashioned bear market we can foresee the possibility of developments which would retard the flow of credit into speculation and facilitate the judicious use of reserve credit in aid of business.

BRANCH BANK PROPOSALS.

Senator Glass and Representative McFadden Express Approval.

(By the Associated Press.)

Washington, Oct. 3.—The suggestion of Comptroller of Currency Pole, in his speech at the bankers' convention in San Francisco yesterday, that congress should instruct the secretary of the treasury, the governor of the federal reserve board and the comptroller of the currency to study the banking situation and recommend to congress what boundaries should be set up in legislation for the extension of branch banking, was said in treasury circles to have met the approval of Secretary Mellon and was possibly an idea proposed by the treasury head himself.

Undersecretary Mills of the treasury characterized the proposals as "chiefly educational," presenting to the bankers some of the suggestions which are being studied by the government.

Senator Glass of Virginia, ranking Democrat on the senate banking committee and former secretary of the treasury in the Wilson administration, expressed approval of the comptroller's idea to extend branch banking, saying that he would support such legislation at the regular session. He added that he had attempted to obtain more liberal branch banking facilities without success in the 1927 McFadden branch banking act.

Chairman McFadden of the house banking committee, author of the 1927 act, also has signified his readiness to consider the problem anew. In that act national banks were permitted to establish branches in all foreign countries, American insular possessions and within corporate limits of cities where their main banks were located.

The Noise Is Terrible.

Riveter—Oh, I don't mind hammering rivets all day long, but the man who works with me hums incessantly.

In the days of Columbus, an Italian abbot offered to fly for the Scottish king. The abbot fashioned a pair of wings, but only succeeded in falling off a high wall.

Love that feeds on beauty alone is apt to die of starvation.

CONVERTIBLE BONDS SLUMPED.

New York, Oct. 3.—Convertible bonds of the telephone companies moved down sharply in the bond market today in company with the fall of their respective stocks.

American Telegraph and Telephone convertible 4½s lost 5 points, International Telephone 4½s were off about 3 points, American I. G. Chemical 5½s down a point. Atchison convertible 4½s lost a point at 152 and Philadelphia & Reading 6s were down 2 at 113.

Transactions in principal bonds in thousands of dollars and the range of prices up to 2 p. m. (the latest available for this edition), as reported by the Associated Press, are here shown:

BELL IS "LORD BALTIMORE."

The controversy over the name of the bell in the Baltimore city hall dome has been settled definitely.

Known as "Big Sam" by some and "Big Ben" by others, and more recently as "Lord Baltimore," the name of the bell has been a point of dispute for years.

"Lord Baltimore," Mayor Broening has been informed, is the actual name of the bell, and the mayor's informant is none other than the man who supervised its making. He is Frank P. Lotz of Watervliet, N. Y., a former Baltimorean, who had charge of the foundry where the bell was made from 1882 to 1891.

"Lord Baltimore," Mr. Lotz wrote the mayor, was made in August, 1889, and its official name, with that of "F. C. Latrobe, Mayor," is inscribed on the bell. In giving the history of "Lord Baltimore" to Mayor Broening, Mr. Lotz said that violinists are able to tune their instruments from its "A" pitch!

CONTRIBUTES TO PAVE ROAD.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

E. W. Ehrmann of Piedmont, Cal., has an "obligation conscience," according to Mayor Stohr of Biggs.

Ehrmann is a taxpayer in Butte County, but pays no taxes in Biggs, the county seat. However, he uses city roads to get to his duck preserves. When the city started putting a road Ehrmann sent Mayor Stohr a check for $100 along with the following note:

"In using this road beyond the city limits I feel that I am contributing my share of the county expenses through the county taxes, but using this street as much as I do within the city limits, I am glad to make this contribution to the city of Biggs for our mutual good."

TRY A 200-MILE PHOTOGRAPH.

From Tit-Bits, London.

Mt. Ranier may be the object of his experiment. In a previous photograph of this mountain, taken at 175 miles, the peak shows about one-quarter of an inch.

Destination Overlooked.

Jinks—He's right, but he forgot to add that where it is going is to the dogs.

SETBACK IN CURB SHARES.

New York, Oct. 3.—(A. P.)—After a steady opening, curb market prices turned heavy today and quotations of numerous leaders, especially in the utility sections, slumped 2 to 9 points below the previous close.

American Superpower, Northern States Power A, American Gas, United Gas Improvement, Old American and Foreign Power Warrants and Allied Power and Light were among the utilities to feel the pressure. Electric Bond and Share sagged several points, and Electric Investors, after opening 2 points higher, fell 9 below the Wednesday close.

The investment trust group, after showing some early firmness, resumed its downward trend. Blue Ridge common went to a new minimum around 16, while Goldman Sacks Trading and Lehman Corporation sold off 2 points or more each.

The oils maintained the forward movement, Gulf Oil advancing 2 and Humble more than a point. Standard of Indiana was steady. Cities Service went into a new high ground above 61.

[Closing curb quotations will appear in later editions.]

Principal transactions in the curb market in hundreds of shares, with the range of prices up to 2 p. m., the latest available for this edition, as reported by the Associated Press, are here shown:

FOR A WIDER SHUTDOWN.

New Plan Would Restrict All Oklahoma Pools to January 1.

Tulsa, Ok., Oct. 3.—A committee of operators representing the Midcontinent Oil and Gas Association, has recommended to that body that proration of production be applied to all fields in the Seminole area, the Allen, Sasakwa, St. Louis, Pearson and Logan County fields, as well as in Oklahoma City and East Earlsboro.

They estimate that market demand for Oklahoma crude will average 660,000 barrels daily during the next three months and the plan is designed to hold production down to approximately that figure. They estimate the state's production would average 800,000 barrels daily during the same period unless restrictions were applied, making it necessary to curtail to the extent of 140,000 barrels daily if serious overproduction is to be avoided. Under the plan suggested Oklahoma City will be wide open from October 12 to 31, inclusive, will be prorated 40 per cent during November and 50 per cent during December.

East Earlboro will remain curtailed 50 per cent to November 1, 40 per cent in November and 50 per cent in December. All other affected fields would be prorated 20 per cent from October 15 to November 30 and 25 per cent in December. With this proration they estimated Oklahoma production would average 660,000 barrels daily from October 12 to January 1.

In all fields where proration is to be applied drilling wells also will be shut down after having set the final string of casing and will be delayed thirty days before drilling in. This section of the plan would apply to all wells started in any of the fields affected between October 12 and January 1

Clay County Test Abandoned.

Clay Center, Kas., Oct. 3.—The wildcat test for oil in section 16-9-4 east, Clay County, about four miles north of Wakefield, had been given up as a dry hole and the casing is being pulled. The well was down slightly over 2,500 feet. No indication of an oil sand was found.

Down 2,400 Feet in Kingman Co.

Wichita, Kas., Oct. 3.—White Eagle's No. 1 Lorenz, section 25-27-5, just across the Sedgwick County line in Kingman County, is attracting attention as it is one of two tests drilling in Kingman County that is expected to bring back the play to Kingman. The test is down 2,400 feet. Operators deserted Kingman County a few years ago after drilling twenty-seven dusters.

New Drilling in Harvey County.

Newton, Kas., Oct. 3.—W. P. Faulkner of Kansas City, who owns large blocks of oil leases in Harvey County, has announced that he will drill the Schowalter and Hupp wells to the siliceous lime. The wells first drilled by Jolly and Ogg of Muskogee, Ok., have been idle for several months. Marland is ready to move in tools for a test in section 8-24-2, Annelly on the Neiman lease.

NOTES OF THE GRAIN TRADE.

"While not consistently active, flour demand is gaining in volume, and recent sales show considerable improvement," said the Northwestern Miller. "Spring wheat mills sold 150 to 200 per cent of their capacity, while the Southwest booked 90 to 100. The business is coming largely from distributors and the medium sized bakers, who are inclined to take advantage of any dips in the wheat market. There is a great deal of hand-to-mouth buying, reflected in the numerous sales of lots of 1,000 barrels or less for immediate shipment. A few round lot bookings also are included in recent orders, but millers are mostly dependent on the smaller orders. Deliveries generally are stipulated prior to January 1. Foreign buying of flour is rather light."

Exports of wheat and flour from the United States since July 1 to last Saturday have amounted approximately to 46 million bushels, compared to 42 million last year. Canadian shipments during the same period have been 42,630,000, compared with 98,777,000 a year ago.

The weekly Oklahoma bulletin said: "Weather conditions were ideal for maturing and harvesting crops. Late corn and grain sorghums are maturing fast and are mostly safe from frost damage. Harvest of early corn is well advanced. Seeding of winter wheat advanced fairly well, though delayed in some localities by dry soil. Soil moisture is good in the extreme northwestern counties, and seeding is further advanced than usual in that section. Early planted wheat is up to a good stand and is making good growth."

Kenneth Pierce, of James E. Bennett & Co., wired from Fort Dodge, Ia.: "I have made several drives into the country this week and have found lots of old corn back yet. No doubt some of it will move to market before the new crop is harvested. Some of the new corn is ripe and ready to go into the cribs. We have a car of new corn running to Omaha now."

Logan & Bryan received a cable from Buenos Aires saying: "We are of the opinion that our wheat crop indicates yield 30 per cent less than last year's record crop. Pampa and Cordoba have short straw, heading prematurely where most advanced."

Today's Grain Statistics.

Carlot receipts of wheat by the leading railroads in Kansas City: Missouri Pacific, 20; Union Pacific, 31; Santa Fe, 12; Burlington, 39; Rock Island, 20; M.-K.-T., 1; Kansas City Southern, 2.

Carlot receipts of corn by the leading railroads in Kansas City: Missouri Pacific, 3; Union Pacific, 5; Burlington, 14.

Elevator stocks of wheat in Kansas City have decreased 14,555 bushels thus far this week and now are 24,662,091 bushels. Corn stocks have increased 3,501 bushels; total, 49,288 bushels. Total of all grain is 24,980,031 bushels.

Shipments of wheat from Black Sea ports this week were 992,000 bushels, compared with 1,176,000 bushels last week; total since August 1 is 4,008,000 bushels. Corn shipments this week were 68,000 bushels; barley, 1,070,000 bushels; oats, 60,000 bushels.

Broomhall estimates shipments of wheat from Argentina this week at 4,961,000 bushels; corn, 4,331,000 bushels; oats, 133,000 bushels.

Wheat receipts in the smaller southwestern markets were: Wichita, 72; Hutchinson, 113; Salina, 41; Atchison, 10; Ft. Worth, 26.

You have often heard it said and probably made the same statement yourself—"Why didn't I invest a few dollars in some of that stock when I had the opportunity?" Referring to some security which was placed on the market at a very low price and has enjoyed an unbelievable increase in value in a very short period of time.

UNITED STATES AIRWAYS, INC.

OFFER THIS OPPORTUNITY:

(1) To invest your money in a company operated by prominent and successful business men of Kansas City.

(2) To invest your money in a company operating a daily transportation service.

(3) To invest your money in a company with a promising future with a possibility of showing tremendous profits from passenger and express and the probability that all first class mail will be carried by air in the very near future.

Kansas City is the hub of aviation transportation. THE UNITED STATES AIRWAYS, INC., is the only aviation transportation company now operating out of Kansas City, with their main offices in Kansas City. This company started a daily transportation service only sixty days ago, and have shown a continual increase in business since the first day of operation. On strength of this showing the stock has increased in value during the past thirty days over 33 1-3%.

This stock was originally offered to the public at $1.25 per share. There is still available a limited amount of United States Airways common stock at $1.75 per share.

Women Are Free!

AN ANCIENT PREJUDICE HAS BEEN REMOVED

Legally, politically and socially woman has been emancipated from those chains which bound her. AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE has exploded the ridiculous theory that forced the stigma of inferiority upon a sex.

Gone is that ancient prejudice against cigarettes—Progress has been made. We removed the prejudice against cigarettes when we removed harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from the tobaccos.

YEARS ago, when cigarettes were made without the aid of modern science, there originated that ancient prejudice against all cigarettes. That criticism is no longer justified. LUCKY STRIKE, the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the choicest tobacco, properly aged and skillfully blended—"It's Toasted."

"TOASTING," the most modern step in cigarette manufacture, removes from LUCKY STRIKE harmful irritants which are present in cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way.

Everyone knows that heat purifies, and so "TOASTING"—LUCKY STRIKE'S extra secret process—removes harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from LUCKIES which in the old-fashioned manufacture of cigarettes cause throat irritation and coughing. Thus "TOASTING" has destroyed that ancient prejudice against cigarette smoking by men and by women.

No Throat Irritation-No Cough.

"It's Toasted"—the phrase that describes the extra "toasting" process applied in the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes. The finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—are scientifically subjected to penetrating heat at minimum, 260°—maximum, 300°, Fahrenheit. The exact, expert regulation of such high temperatures removes impurities. More than a slogan, "It's Toasted" is recognized by millions as the most modern step in cigarette manufacture.

SALE OF SHIPS SCORED

Controller General's Report on the Audit Says "Irresponsible Companies" Got Ships at "Exceedingly Low" Prices.

(By the Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Controller General McCarl reported to congress today the United States Shipping Board Merchant Fleet Corporation had sold ships "to irresponsible companies who evidently would not or could not meet their obligations under the contract."

The statement was made in a report of an audit of the financial affairs of the corporation made by the controller general's office.

"It appears from the audit of sales of ships," the report said, "that in certain cases ships were sold at exceedingly low prices compared with their construction costs; that a successful bidder was granted terms materially advantageous to him, which terms were not announced in the advertisement for bids; that ships were sold to irresponsible companies, who evidently would not or could not meet their obligations under the contract, which failures resulted in losses to the United States; and that in some cases one year and more elapsed between the date of sale and the date of making final returns for the proceeds."

CLEAR FIELD TO KVALE'S SON.

A Special Primary to Choose a Candidate Is Unnecessary.

(By the Associated Press.)

WILLMAR, MINN., Oct. 3.—Withdrawal of two Republican candidates, leaving only one member from each party in the race, will make unnecessary the special primary election in the seventh Minnesota congressional district, called for October 9. A successor to the Rev. O. J. Kvale of Benson will be selected in the final election October 16. The three candidates are Paul J. Kvale, Farmer-Labor, son of the late member of congress; James C. Morrison, Republican, and C. B. Johnson, Willmar, Democrat.

You're going to fly sometime ...why not LEARN NOW?

In eight short weeks, at convenient Curtiss Fields, you can have your private flying license!

OF COURSE, YOU'RE GOING TO FLY! For the thrill of it, for the freedom of it, for plain, common-sense, business reasons! Then why wait? Why delay that moment when you first take a ship aloft . . . alone! Why put off that time when you become a licensed pilot, capable of handling a plane with professional skill?

Is it a question of the time involved? Don't let that worry you! Eight short weeks, on the average, are all it takes to make the beginner a licensed private pilot by the thoroughgoing Curtiss method!

Is it cost?

That's no serious problem! Curtiss . . . the country's largest and oldest flying organization . . . arranges convenient terms . . . offers planes and training on the same simple plan under which you buy cars.

Is it a question of training facilities? That should be the least of your worries! For you have a Curtiss Flying Service Base right at hand . . . a place where you can get the finest flying education the country offers almost as conveniently as you obtained your elementary schooling.

A place that is the center of all flying activities of this section . . . a place where you come in daily contact with every phase of flying as a business!

When you enroll as a Curtiss Student, you begin a course patterned after the proven methods of the Army and Navy flying schools. You are instructed by men first selected for unusual flying ability, then especially trained as teachers.

You are given a thorough course in fundamentals . . . theory of flight, aerodynamics, plane and engine design. But right at the same time . . . you get actual, practical flying instruction! You take to the air on the first day . . . learn to fly by flying.

As a result . . . you emerge from your training not just a pilot, but a Curtiss pilot. And, remember, among the 1,500 fliers graduated from Curtiss schools are the leaders in every phase of flying . . .

There are far more reasons why your training should be Curtiss training than we can give here. There are far more reasons why your training should start right now than we can possibly list in this advertisement . . . reasons we want you and your family to know.

Do just one thing . . .

Decide for yourself . . . "Shall I learn to fly?" Then mail the coupon at right, or telephone, or call on the Curtiss School Manager for all the details of what Curtiss offers you right now.

PRACTICAL INSTRUCTION—The flying student's training includes a practical working knowledge of the leading types of engines.

In Memoriam

IN loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Mary Martinac, who passed away 2 years ago today, Oct. 3.

'Tis God alone who knows the heartaches,
'Tis God alone who sees the tears
As they fall in sweet remembrance
For the one we loved so dear.
Dearest mother, how we miss you,
God alone can tell, who will
Some day join together
All those who loved you well.
As we kneel in aweful reverence
And we breathe a silent prayer,
That when earthly strife is over
We'll be happy with you there.

—Sadly missed by children and grandchildren, Sergt. and Mrs. Wm. F. Mehring, U. S. army, Mr. and Mrs. Vod Bojeck, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Baer, Miss Rose Soptich, Mr. Joseph Soptich.

IN loving remembrance of Lester R. Baldwin, who passed away 4 years ago today, Oct. 3, 1925.

Sad and sudden was the call
For my dear Lester, loved by all.
Remembrance is a golden chain
To have, to love and then to part

Elizabeth, Albany, N. Y.

IN loving memory of H. M. Cottrell, who passed away 1 year ago today:

One who was better God never made;
Wonderful father, so loyal and true;
One in a million, Dad, that was you.

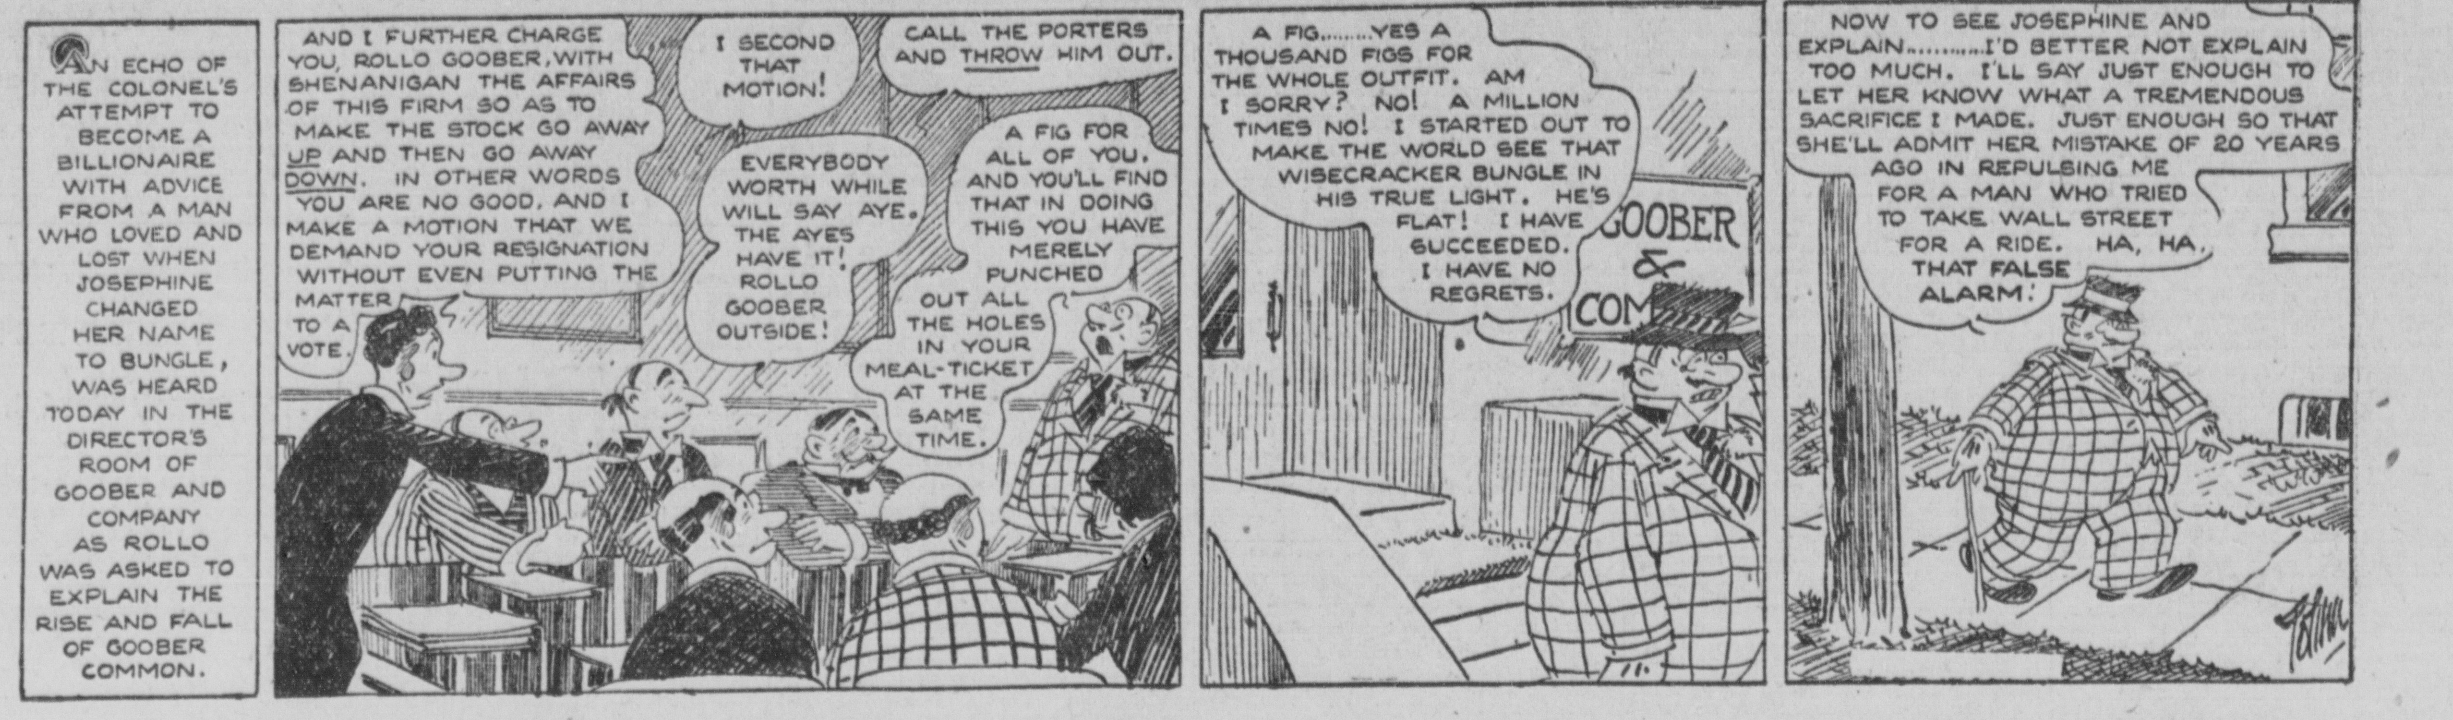
THE BUNGLE FAMILY—HOPE.

(Copyright, 1929.)



AN ECHO OF THE COLONEL'S ATTEMPT TO BECOME A BILLIONAIRE WITH ADVICE FROM A MAN WHO LOVED AND LOST WHEN JOSEPHINE CHANGED HER NAME TO BUNGLE, WAS HEARD TODAY IN THE DIRECTOR'S ROOM OF GOOBER AND COMPANY AS ROLLO WAS ASKED TO EXPLAIN THE RISE AND FALL OF GOOBER COMMON.
AND I FURTHER CHARGE YOU, ROLLO GOOBER, WITH SHENANIGAN THE AFFAIRS OF THIS FIRM SO AS TO MAKE THE STOCK GO AWAY UP AND THEN GO AWAY DOWN. IN OTHER WORDS YOU ARE NO GOOD, AND I MAKE A MOTION THAT WE DEMAND YOUR RESIGNATION WITHOUT EVEN PUTTING THE MATTER TO A VOTE.
I SECOND THAT MOTION!
EVERYBODY WORTH WHILE WILL SAY AYE. THE AYES HAVE IT! ROLLO GOOBER OUTSIDE!
CALL THE PORTERS AND THROW HIM OUT.
A FIG FOR ALL OF YOU, AND YOU'LL FIND THAT IN DOING THIS YOU HAVE MERELY PUNCHED OUT ALL THE HOLES IN YOUR MEAL-TICKET AT THE SAME TIME.
A FIG........YES A THOUSAND FIGS FOR THE WHOLE OUTFIT. AM I SORRY? NO! A MILLION TIMES NO! I STARTED OUT TO MAKE THE WORLD SEE THAT WISECRACKER BUNGLE IN HIS TRUE LIGHT. HE'S FLAT! I HAVE SUCCEEDED. I HAVE NO REGRETS.
GOOBER & COM
NOW TO SEE JOSEPHINE AND EXPLAIN..........I'D BETTER NOT EXPLAIN TOO MUCH. I'LL SAY JUST ENOUGH TO LET HER KNOW WHAT A TREMENDOUS SACRIFICE I MADE. JUST ENOUGH SO THAT SHE'LL ADMIT HER MISTAKE OF 20 YEARS AGO IN REPULSING ME FOR A MAN WHO TRIED TO TAKE WALL STREET FOR A RIDE. HA, HA, THAT FALSE ALARM.

TILLIE THE TOILER—THE BOSS GETS EXCITED.

(Copyright, 1929.)

WHAT'S THIS ALL ABOUT, WHIPPLE?
IT'S A MORE IMPROVED TYPE OF WASHING MACHINE THAN OURS
WHO SAYS IT'S A BETTER WASHING MACHINE THAN OURS? WE'RE SELLING 'EM, AREN'T WE?
WHY, SURE, MR. SIMPKINS, BUT—
BUT WHAT? AS LONG AS IT SELLS IT'S GOOD ENOUGH FOR ME: WHEN IT DON'T SELL THEN I'LL CHANGE IT
YES, SIR
THE BOSS IS ALL EXCITED OVER A NEW WASHING MACHINE I'VE BEEN TELLING HIM ABOUT
OH DO TELL ME ABOUT IT, MR WHIPPLE

WAR DEPARTMENT, U. S. Engineer Office, 707 Postal Telegraph Building, Kansas City, Missouri.—By virtue of Public No. 560—69th Congress An Act authorizing the Secretary of War to cause a preliminary examination and survey to be made of the Missouri River, from the upper end of Quindaro Bend, (mile 398) to its mouth, with a view to securing a channel depth of nine feet at low water with suitable widths, a public hearing on the subject will be held by the undersigned at the Assembly Room, Chamber of Commerce K. C. A. C. Building, Kansas City, Missouri, at 10:00 A. M., Tuesday, October 8, 1929.—All interested parties are invited to be present or to be represented at the above time and place, particularly navigation interests and the officials of any county, city, town, or local association whose interests may be affected by the construction of the proposed project. They will be given an opportunity to express their views upon the economic feasibility of the proposed project and to submit data supporting claims for or against its adoption.—Oral statements will be heard, but for accuracy of record, all important facts and arguments should be submitted in writing, as the records of the hearing will be forwarded for consideration by the War Department. Written statements may be handed to the undersigned at the hearing or mailed to him—Theodore Wyman, jr., Captain, Corps of Engineers, Acting District Engineer.

SEALED PROPOSALS, in triplicate, will be received in the office of the Chief Clerk, Department of Commerce, Nineteenth st. and Pennsylvania avenue N. W., Washington, D. C., until 2 p. m., October 15, 1929, and then opened, for furnishing and installing oil engine generator sets at the Constant Frequency Monitoring Station, Grand Island, Neb. Blanks for submitting proposals may be obtained upon application to the Chief Clerk of the Department at the above address. Proposal No. 21540.

NOTICE OF ELECTION UPON A PROPOSITION TO ISSUE BONDS OF THE SCHOOL DISTRICT OF KANSAS CITY JACKSON COUNTY, MISSOURI.

Notice is hereby given that an election will be held in the School District of Kansas City in the County of Jackson, State of Missouri, on Saturday, the 19th day of October, A. D. 1929, at which there will be submitted to the qualified voters of said District a proposition authorizing the Board of Directors of said School District to borrow on behalf of the School District the sum of $5,000,000.00 for the purpose of purchasing sites for school houses and additional ground attached to sites for school houses already owned, and erecting school houses and building additions to, remodeling and reconstructing buildings existing at the time of making the loan and furnishing same within said School District and for the payment thereof to issue bonds of the School District, said bonds to be 5,000 in number, each of the denomination of One Thousand ($1,000) Dollars, to be payable to bearer twenty (20) years from date, or to be payable to bearer and due serially within from one (1) to twenty (20) years from date, as the Board of Directors may determine, with interest from date at the rate of not exceeding five per centum (5 per cent) per annum, payable semi-annually on the first days of January and July in each year, coupons for the interest to be attached to the bonds, both principal and interest to be payable in the City and State of New York in gold coin of the United States of America of the present standard of weight and fineness and authorizing the levy and collection of an annual tax sufficient to pay the interest on all of said bonds as it falls due, and also to constitute a sinking fund for the payment of the principal of all of said bonds within twenty (20) years from their date.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 3.

How Would It Affect America?

The committee of independent financial experts, which met in Paris this spring under the chairmanship of Owen D. Young, proposes that the chief nations of the world establish an international bank. This institution would be equipped to administer the reparations settlement but that would not be its sole function by any means. Rather would the reparations feature tend to become a side issue and finally disappear altogether when the German payments cease in 1988. For the bank, as recommended in the Young plan, would be a continuing institution.

The experts, themselves, have pointed out in their report that the bank would in time become an organization "not simply, or even predominantly, concerned with the handling of reparations, but also with furnishing to the world of international commerce and finance important facilities hitherto lacking." What are those facilities? The experts do not elucidate, but they are to be inferred from the plan.

The institution is a bank. It is to have a capital, like any other bank, except that no matter who owns the stock, it will be voted by representatives of certain central banks or their substitutes. The central or substitute banks of Great Britain, France, Germany, Belgium, Italy, Japan and the United States shall always have an equal voting power. Some stock, however, may be owned in other countries and voted by their banks.

What are the banking functions assigned to this institution under the Young plan? Here are some of them:

1. To buy and sell gold bullion and coin, to earmark gold for the account of central banks and to make advances to central banks on gold as security.
2. To buy and sell for its own account bills of exchange and other short-term obligations of prime liquidity.
3. To open and maintain deposit accounts with central banks.
4. To rediscount for central banks bills taken from their portfolios, and to make loans to them on the security of such bills.
5. To buy and sell for its own account intermediate or long-term securities. Its holdings of such securities not to exceed the paid-in capital and reserve funds.
6. To issue its own obligations at long or short term, secured or unsecured, for the purpose of relending to any central bank.

It will be seen that these are very wide powers. The most conspicuous omission is the authority to issue its own currency. Otherwise this international bank apparently could deal with the central banks of the various countries very much as the Federal Reserve Bank does with its members here in the tenth district. Certain obvious advantages are to be derived from such arrangement. One of them is the efficiency of operation offered by the bank's use as a clearing house.

It has been contended that this international organization might prove to be dangerously powerful and that it might be so directed as to harm the financial interests of certain individual countries, like the United States, for example. What safeguards are provided?

Defenders of the plan argue that the bank will be outside the field of political influence, since its directors are to be appointed by banking institutions and not by governments. But the central banks of certain countries have not always been free of governmental influence. The plan specifically states that "the investment powers of the bank shall never be used in such a way as to exercise a predominant influence over business interests in any country;" and no credit operation may be undertaken, affecting any particular market, without the consent of the governor of the central bank concerned or his nominee.

Whether or not such provisions offer adequate protection is a matter for careful consideration. One economist has asserted that all the other central banks owe us money and for that reason it does not matter whether we have two directors or ten so far as voting influence is concerned. It has also been suggested that "the permissive functions are not likely to play a very important part for some time to come."

It is always difficult to foresee how an untried institution will function. Perhaps it is true that this country has nothing to fear, that we will really dominate the institution. And perhaps it is true that the bank may not exercise much of an influence for many years. But it is important that in our anxiety to affect a settlement of the reparations problem we do not overlook the far wider implications of the plan presented to us by these independent financial experts.

Why Bar Raw Milk?

There is no question that a large volume of milk used in any large city should be pasteurized. Also there is no reason why a considerable supply of raw milk should not be served in Greater Kansas City, considering the proximity and regulation of many of the dairies delivering it.

Therefore, it is rather surprising that the health department of Kansas City, Kansas, should propose to require that all milk served in that city shall be pasteurized. If there are health conditions affected by raw milk, the quality of milk should be improved and, if necessary, the quantity reduced and confined solely to such dairies and herds as can guarantee perfectly healthful milk.

The point is that a city situated as Kansas City, Kansas, is should not be wholly deprived of a raw milk supply, which is essential to the best results where milk diet is important. Strict regulations are essential, but it is possible to make them effective against deleterious products.

The President and the Senate.

The senate vote in favor of taking from the President the authority to make tariff changes on the recommendation of the tariff commission was political rather than economic. Executive changes in the tariff since the flexible provision was authorized in 1922 have been notably favorable to agriculture. Yet members from the industrial East supported the provision while nearly all the members from the agricultural states opposed it. The regular group of insurgent Republicans was augmented by several western members who ordinarily have stood with the administration, but now have special favors to ask in the way of local protection.

The flexible tariff remains in the senate bill, but if the power of the executive to use it is not restored, it will mean little, for to leave the changes in the tariff to congress would mean frequent, prolonged and probably useless tariff discussion. The authority granted to the President was to avoid this very thing.

While a readily workable flexible tariff is important, the much more urgent thing before congress is the tariff bill as a whole. If it could be foreseen that the coalition against executive control of the tariff between revision sessions means a successful fight for a better bill, there might be some satisfaction in the vote of yesterday. But in that coalition are members who took their stand solely or mainly to get favors in return. The northwestern senators who changed their alignment want duties on shingles and lumber, at the cost of millions to the farmers. Johnson of California is not unmindful of the desire in his state for higher duties on citrous fruits. The Democratic members who, on the other hand, left their party's line-up to support the administration, are looking to higher duties on sugar, or, as to the Florida members, on citrous fruits and vegetables.

What the country wants is a more equitable tariff bill, with every unreasonable duty on the already heavily protected industrials removed and with every reasonable duty on agricultural products, always underprotected, to be provided. This would be in accordance with the pledges of both parties in the campaign.

As to the flexible tariff, the senate has not yet won. There is little comfort for the upper house in contemplating the attitude of the lower house, which probably will treat the senate's action as it did its vote on the debenture feature of the farm bill. At this time it seems reasonably sure that the President's tariff powers will be retained in the ultimate bill if it is accepted by the house.

Or Maybe Congress Was Easier.

Mr. Shearer, being the modest man that he is, denies that he ever boasted he was responsible for failure of the Geneva naval limitations conference of 1927. Yet Mr. Shearer hasn't denied an opening statement in a letter he wrote to a shipbuilding official and made a part of the senate investigating committee record, in which he said: "I wish to call to your attention that as the result of my efforts during the sixty-ninth congress, eight 10,000-ton cruisers are now under construction." A go-getter with results of that kind to his credit ought to have accomplished something at Geneva.

ANDREW JOHNSON'S SUCCESSFUL FIGHT AGAINST INTOLERANCE IN TENNESSEE

The Young Mountaineer, Forsaking His Tailor's Bench, Cut Out a Brilliant Career for Himself in State Politics by Waging Relentless and Successful War Against the Rising Tide of Know-Nothingism.

It is gratifying that in the process of "debunking" our national heroes there has been time to examine the shadows obscuring a national figure whose legend has been derogatory, even destructive. In the search for truth students have stumbled into a new understanding of Andrew Johnson, the "tailor President," whose very name for a time was a red flag to the North, anathema to the South. Traitor in the eyes of the South, whence he came to battle for the union; buffoon, as viewed in the North, by those who would avenge bloodshed with a horrible program of reconstruction.

Publishers of books and magazines are grinding out the new story of the mountaineer-tradesman, who sat in the White House in the long, dark days after the assassination of Lincoln. Interest naturally centers upon his background, his romantic rise to the rank of statesman, the lies of politicians, his courageous fight for the union, his determination to spare the bleeding South the ravages of a cruel reconstruction, and finally, the drama of an unjust impeachment. Of his long and useful career in the roles of governor, representative in congress and senator, not enough has been written. That is regrettable, for it was in congress and as governor that he revealed his full stature.

Johnson's activities in congress were marked by two noteworthy achievements, one of which entitles him to a high place among American statesmen. The other is of special interest in an era of so-called "100 per cent Americanism." The first was his fight for the Homestead law, and the second, the routing of Know-Nothings in Tennessee.

THE FOE OF INTOLERANCE.

The tailor of Greenville was one of the first men in American public life to feel the sting of religious prejudice in a battle for public office. When he entered upon his campaign for re-election to congress in 1845 he found William G. Brownlow, the fighting parson, editor of the Jonesboro Whig, in the field against him. Brownlow had a facile pen, a bitter tongue and great moral and physical courage. He was a keen character analyst, but not always careful of his facts. Among other things, he charged Johnson, first, with being a Catholic, and second, with being an infidel. But Johnson had been in too many Masonic lodges in his district for the statements to stick, and he was elected by a majority of 1,343, a large one for the times. After the election, he wrote:

"Now, when there is no member of congress to elect, when the public mind is tranquil, I repeat, what I have again and again said, that the charge of infidelity, as preferred against me in the last campaign, is utterly false from beginning to end, and that so far as the doctrines of the Bible are concerned, or the great scheme of salvation, as founded, taught and practiced by Jesus Christ Himself, I never did entertain a solitary doubt."

And, he asked, if he were an infidel, how could he be a Catholic? But the question was not thus to be disposed of. These were the first rumblings of the wave of intolerance that was to reach its peak in the formation of the Know-Nothing party, and Andrew Johnson was, perhaps, its most successful assailant.

The Whigs, declaring there was more than one way to skin the East Tennessee rabbit, carried their fight to the state legislature and gerrymandered Johnson out of congress. To their despair, Johnson did not announce for re-election in the campaign of 1852, and that fall the Democrats nominated him for governor. Temple, Johnson's unsuccessful opponent in 1847, gives this version of the nominating convention:

One of the most prominently mentioned for the honor was Andrew Ewing of Nashville (later father-in-law of Henry Watterson). Ewing had said when Johnson was gerrymandered out of congress that the tailor ought to be elected governor as a reprimand to the Whigs. Johnson took this as a pledge of support and when the convention opened said to Ewing, "I place my interests in your hands." Ewing withdrew from the contest, saying a sense of delicacy forbad him any longer being a candidate.

TEMPLE'S VIEW PARTISAN.

Temple says that Ewing had no recollection of making the statement and that Johnson tricked him out of the nomination. It is plain that Ewing was tricked, but whether fairly or dishonorably must be decided by one not so partisan as Temple and one familiar with the ways of all conventions.

It was a campaign to Andrew's liking. The Whigs had tried to push him off the political stage. Their candidate, Gustavus Henry, who had inherited the silver tongue of Patrick Henry, was a foeman worthy his mettle. The issues were clear-cut and the personalities of the two men made for thrilling drama.

It was in Memphis, which had a rather large Irish population, that Henry recalled Johnson's vote against relief, by federal appropriation, of famine-stricken Ireland. It looked dark in Memphis for Johnson as Henry finished, but Johnson lost no time in answering the shouts: "What about it, Andy?"

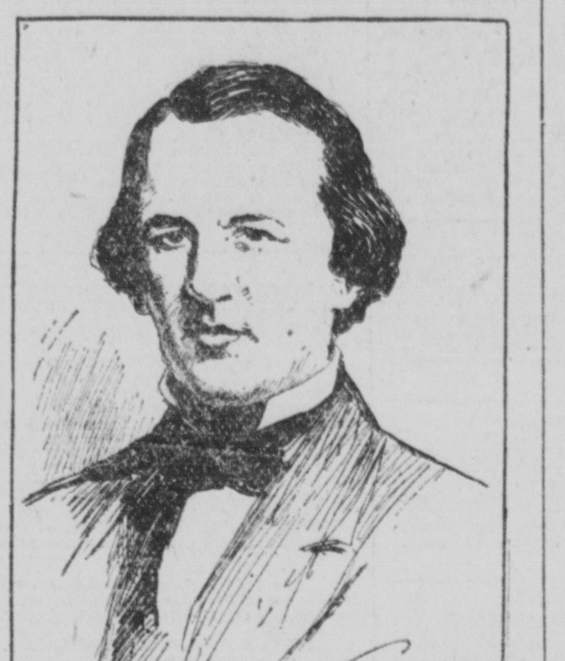
"I voted against the appropriation," Johnson replied, "because congress has no right thus to vote away funds of the treasury which are collected for other purposes. But I proposed to the members that we give our salaries for a certain length of time; and when they would not agree to this, I put my hand in my pocket and gave $50 to the cause." He turned to Henry. "How much did you give?"

"Nothing," Henry admitted.

It was a cheap gesture, but effective, and the crowd broke into wild cheers. There was no besting Johnson in the hustings.

A SUCCESSFUL ADMINISTRATION.

Johnson became governor October 3, 1853. The success of his administration warranted his renomination, and he made the most spectacular fight of his career in a campaign based on personal and religious prejudices. That ugly creature which first showed its head in the campaign against Brownlow had become a national issue. Know-Nothingism had divided the state and threatened the nation, in the belief of many leaders of the day. None knew the party's strength, because its membership was secret, but all who answered, "I don't known," to political queries were believed to be members.



ANDREW JOHNSON, THE YOUNG TAILOR WHO PREACHED THE DOCTRINE OF RELIGIOUS TOLERANCE.

"Put none but Americans on duty tonight," was said to be the countersign. To be a member one had to be a native citizen of the United States, a Protestant, either born of Protestant parents or reared under the influence of Protestants, and not united in marriage with a Roman Catholic. A question asked a candidate was: "Are you willing to use your influence and vote for native-born American citizens for all offices of honor, trust and profit in the gift of the people, to exclusion of all foreigners and aliens, and Roman Catholics in particular, and without regard to party predilection?"

There were probably 100,000 Known-Nothings in Tennessee. The Whigs of the state adopted the principles of the secret order and nominated Meridith P. Gentry, who had a brilliant career in congress. Some attention was devoted to the Kansas-Nebraska bill, that harbinger of strife, but the chief issue in Tennessee was "Americanism." Brownlow's old charge that Johnson was a Catholic was renewed, but the candidate paid little attention to it. The chief basis for the statement was that Martha Johnson, a daughter, attended a school in Georgetown, the seat of a large convent. Martha, in fact, had attended Mrs. English's Seminary for Young Ladies, but Johnson wisely left it for his friends to make that known. He was too sharp to weaken his position by denying or affirming the rumor.

He had taken a positive stand on the issues before they assumed national importance. In the campaign for re-election he had merely to repeat those forceful arguments he had used in his own district against the parson, against Haynes, in 1851, and in Washington during the Twenty-eighth congress.

A COURAGEOUS THRUST.

Temple describes the first clash of that campaign, at Murfreesboro, in the wealthy and aristocratic Middle Tennessee. The audience was more Whig than Democrat, but Johnson had determined his first stroke should be his most daring. He arraigned Know-Nothingism on a dozen counts, exclaiming by way of climax:

"Show me a Know-Nothing and I will show you a loathsome reptile on whose neck every honest man should put his foot. The Know-Nothings are no better than John A. Murrell's clan of outlaws."

The palor of rage swept over the audience. There was a long silence. Then a hundred shouted: "It's a lie! It's a lie!"

"Instantly," to quote Temple, "the cocking of pistols could be heard on every side, followed by ominous silence. Their hearts stopped beating. Men ceased to breathe. Johnson stood for a short time unmoved, gazing around on the fearful scene he had evoked, and then deliberately resumed his speech."

Although the eloquent Gentry was addressing a friendly audience, he failed to convince the Whigs he could support his convictions (if, indeed, they were his convictions) and the people of Murfreesboro were disheartened that night, knowing Johnson would sweep the state.

The principles of Know-Nothingism, Johnson said in a speech in Cleveland, would exclude Methodists, whose founder was an Englishman; the Presbyterians, whose chief apologist was a Scotsman, and so on through the list of denominations.

"I do not appear here to defend the Roman Catholic religion," he had said in congress. "There are few Catholics in my region and there are prejudices against them. But I protest against the doctrine here advanced by the gentleman from North Carolina. The Catholics of this country are entitled to exercise of all the rights secured to them by the Constitution of the United States—that of worshipping God in the manner dictated by their own consciences. . . . This country is not prepared to establish an inquisition to try men for their religious beliefs; and those who assail any religious sect in this country will find the majority of the people arrayed against them.

"Are the ten thousand temples that have been erected, based upon the sufferings and atonement of a crucified Savior, with their glittering spires wasting themselves in the Heavens, all to topple and fall, crushed and buried beneath the storms and ravings of party excitement? Is man to be set upon man, and, in the name of God, to lift his hand against the throat of his fellow? Is the land that gave a brother birth to be watered with a brother's blood? Are the bloodhounds of persecution and proscription to be let loose upon foreigners and Catholics because of their party affiliation in the late contest?"

How could he meet the poor, oppressed Irishman on the seashore and forbid his entrance, he had asked in reply to his opponent, Haynes. Who would stay the honest German with upbraidings that he was a foreigner? Might he not pause to describe the Battle of Camden in which the brave old DeKalb fought, and point to the grave which contains the hero's bones and ask if he might not be permitted to enjoy a country "beneath whose soil the brave DeKalb sleeps in peace."

HEWS TO THE LINE.

Johnson hewed to the line and was elected.

Soon after the campaign Gentry and Parson Brownlow were in the City hotel in Nashville. Gentry was in his cups, and was denouncing Johnson with all his rare eloquence.

"You should not curse him, but pray for him," Brownlow admonished.

"What!" exclaimed Gentry. "Pray for the salvation of Andrew Johnson! Why, to save his soul would exhaust the plan of salvation, and where would the rest of us be?"

Thousands of Tennesseeans felt just that way about Johnson, but there always seemed to be a few thousand more who followed him almost blindly. After his election on the issue of "Americanism" his life was often threatened. One story is that Nashville was placarded one morning with the announcement that the governor would be shot upon sight. His supporters assembled at his house offering to accompany him to the statehouse.

"No," the governor replied, "if I am to be shot at, I want to be in the way of the bullet."

And so he walked alone, with great show of dignity, and resumed his duties. There was much of the man of destiny in Andrew Johnson. L. C. M.

KANSAS NOTES.

About the only way we see for one local nimrod to get any ducks this season is get some tame ones. Anyhow, the hardware merchants are pulling for him, says the Great Bend Tribune.

A speaker said yesterday that listening in on radio had been known to improve the hearing of deaf persons. He failed to state that on occasion it has also proved the advantage of being deaf, adds the Lawrence Journal-World.

Emporia opens a new theater this week named "The Granada," and the Gazette is giving its readers a series of lessons in pronunciation of the name, so that, as the editor says, parents will not embarrass their little daughters by their ignorance.

No boy should be allowed to graduate from any American college or university until he has learned how to wear a dress suit, according to a professor of Drury college. "But what would distinguish glee club members from other students if they all go to wearing dress suits?" the Pittsburg Headlight wants to know.

The Atchison Globe complains that the radio has turned the farmers into a lot of baseball fans.

HELPFUL ANGELO.

Additional details in the theft of Charlie Scott's Buick, furnished by his son, Angelo, in the Iola Register: "Just by way of helping the Boss out a little on the side, we wish to mention privately that after going for two years without any theft insurance on his Buick, he bought a theft policy just seven days before it was stolen. If any of the readers of our column feel that they could conscientiously act as character witnesses for the Boss when the insurance company starts to investigate, we'd like to have their names on file as soon as possible."

At last reports the position of candidate in opposition to Henry Allen for the Kansas senator's seat next year was still open, notes Joe Murray in the Lawrence Journal-World. The movement to draft the third district congressman failed and newspaper comments have made it apparent to the public that the position does not hold exactly the bright future painted so unavailingly for Mr. Sproul.

DO RIGHT BY DOLL.

Dolly Curtis Gann returned to Washington to have this seating business out for once and all, and her brother, Vice-President Curtis, temporarily waives her rights of social precedence in favor of Lady Howard, wife of the British ambassador who is giving a dinner honoring Premier MacDonald.

So far as Dolly Gann is concerned, the matter is settled. But Kansas hereby tells the whole wide world that there will be a real ruckus if Washington don't do right by Our Doll. Unless she is borne to the dinner triumphant on the shoulders of Mrs. Nick Longworth and seated in the center of the table as a centerpiece with a silver candelabra in both hands and fed her soup with a long-handled spoon by the wife of the secretary of state, Kansas won't be responsible for what her presidential electors do in 1932.

TO A YOUNG LADY.

Sweet stream, that winds through yonder glade,
Apt emblem of a virtuous maid—
Far from the world's gay busy throng;
With gentle yet prevailing force,
Intent upon her destined course;
Graceful and useful all she does,
Blessing and blest where'er she goes;
Pure-bosom'd as that watery glass,
And Heaven reflected in her face.

STARBEAMS.

It appears that buying stocks when they're low and selling 'em when they're high isn't the way to do it. Anyhow, that was George Bungle's slogan, and now look at him.

The Ford factory is slowing down production in order to make certain improvements on the new cars. This news will be received skeptically by at least one Ford driver we know who has insisted up to date that the present model is perfect.

The milk producers' increase of 6 cents a gallon to distributors will be passed on to the consumers at the rate of 2 cents a quart, according to yesterday's announcement. Thus the consumer begins to realize how lucky he is that there are only four quarts to the gallon.

Or does that mean that in the distributing business there are three quarts in a gallon?

MICE AND MEN, PLUS WOMEN.

He planned it even to a moon
When we would meet again;
He searched the almanac for possibility or rain.

He bought an open model car,
For quiet roads made search,
He never even dreamed that I
Would leave him in the lurch.

He wired, wrote, long-distance phoned
To plead I not be late,
And then I in the foolish way

PROGRESS?

"Come, Adam," said Eve, "bring the camel around,
For Cain's wife has asked us to tea.
It's only a mile, but it's over rough ground,
Then rode the short distance with no other sound,
But the groan of their double-humped mount.

"Come, Lindy," said Anne, "quick, warm up the plane,
For mother has asked us to tea.
You know, dear, it's four hundred seventy miles,
So we ought to be starting at three."
And made the short journey with no other sound

Plays Piano After Only 10 Lessons

BETTY JANE PETERSON is only ten, and has taken but ten piano lessons, but if you should happen to pass her home, at 5321 Michigan, and hear her playing, you'd imagine she had studied for several years . . . and by the way, the piano you'd hear is Betty's reward for accomplishing so much in such a short time.

Betty has just finished the FREE PIANO COURSE at Jenkins. She not only plays any number of pieces, but has written both words and music of an original melody.

Every week sees other girls and boys completing our Free 10-Lesson Course . . . youngsters who have actually learned to play well after only ten lessons. Most of them do so well that their parents immediately place them under private teachers for further studies.

New classes start every Saturday, at 1015 Walnut street. Lessons are given on Saturdays only and do not interfere with school work. The only charge is $1, which pays for all music and equipment. No piano is needed in the home. Why not start your children this Saturday?

SYNOPSIS.

James Dorn, 28-year-old aerial map-maker, with headquarters at Titan Pass, in the Canadian Rockies, is surprised one night when his 27-year-old friend, Kansas Eby, tells him he has seen a frightened girl leave the transcontinental train and run into the bush. Kansas has been attending the dance at Titan Pass and afterward returns by plane to his headquarters at Eagle Nest, 200 miles east. After midnight an old native, Pere Bergelot, brings the girl across Titan Lake in a canoe to Jim's tent. The girl is Aurore McNain. She says her father, a prospector for platinum, is in danger at Lake of the Dawn, 200 miles north, and she wants Jim to let her accompany him in his plane to that point to rescue her father. Jim doubts her story but he consents to take her. Arrived at the lake, Jim finds the girl has lied. Her father is not here. She has told him the story to get him to take her to a little island in this small lake where there is a cabin that has not been used for several years. She admits she lied, in order to escape from someone. She is versed in woodcraft, having formerly lived in the woods with her father, who, Jim understands, was an engineer or field scientist or engaged in some profession which took him to various places throughout the Northwest. She says she fears Jim would not understand if she tried to explain her predicament but will tell him if he insists. He permits her to keep her secret for the present. He returns to Titan Pass and learns that a man is about seeking a clue to Aurore. Old Bergelot hints Dorn has fallen in love with Aurore. He admits it. Following the girl's instructions, he goes to Edmonton and buys supplies for her. After selling the costly barrette she gave him, he is shadowed to his hotel and placed under arrest. The detective offers him $20,000 to reveal the girl's whereabouts. Jim slugs the detective and escapes. He wires his friend Kansas to fly his plane to meet him. Next day Jim lands at Lake of the Dawn and delivers Aurore's supplies. She meets him eagerly and it thrills him to think she is falling in love with him, although he has a twinge of worry whenever he recalls that Bergelot warned him it would be impossible for him to marry her. Returning to Titan Pass, Dorn is confronted by the Edmonton private detective and his employer, Henry Carter-Snowdon. The latter is extremely wealthy and has some sort of hold upon Aurore. When Jim refuses to reveal the girl's whereabouts, a fight ensues and Jim thrashes both men. Next day Jim sees Aurore again and she is determined to tell him about herself to prevent his falling more deeply in love with her. But she only tells him it would be impossible for him to marry her. Back at Titan Pass, Carter-Snowdon's hirelings capture Jim's Indian ally, old Luke Illewahwacet, and try to torture information out of him, whereupon Jim blows up their camp with a stick of dynamite and frees Luke. Jim takes Luke north to guard Aurore's island. Jim's jealousy flames when, dropping in unexpectedly, he sees Aurore's table set for two. She tells him the extra place was kept for him. She accompanies him on a day's fly-ing. But for her presence in the plane Carter-Snowdon's fighting machine would have attacked Jim. After escaping his pursuers, Jim drops his plane on a small mountain lake.

SITTING on a pontoon, kicking their heels against it, Aurore and Dorn ate the trout sandwiches she had brought, and opened a can of erbswurst from his emergency rations; and Dorn scooped up a tin cup of the sparkling water and placed it between them.

Afterward Aurore took his binoculars, and from the pontoon tip she turned them all around the punch-bowl. As he sat against a strut, looking at Aurore's slim, beautiful figure so starkly outlined against the blue water, old Luke's words about her being the mother of strong children were running in Dorn's mind. And yet he could not think of Aurore as a mother. He simply could not imagine all that wild-born freedom of hers turned to maternal tenderness. She seemed a creature never to be caught and trammelled, an incarnation of spring and of the pure chaste spirit of the mountains.

Reflecting impersonally, Dorn thought: "Aurore likes the same things as I do, our outlooks run in common, she's mountain-born, and so am I. We'd have infinitely more to build on than the mere physical attraction between man and woman." But he checked his thoughts sharply, remembering the four unfathomable years of her life and what she had told him that evening of the storm.

Aurore must have felt his eyes upon her so steadily, for she said: "If you'll come up here with me, Jim, I'll show you several things worth looking at. And we ought to name this lake, Jim."

On the south side of the punch-bowl a stupendous rock wall rose steep from the water, two thousand feet high. Its outcroppings were bearded with lichens, its face cracked and seamed with the frost of innumerable winters. Above it a great mass of steel-blue glacier ice, flowing a few feet a year, thrust its tentacles over the escarpment and periodically sent icebergs thundering into the lake below.

Halfway up the rock at a place so sheer it looked as though a fly would have trouble sticking there, an old mountain goat, a patch of purest white, sat placidly on his haunches, turning his telescopic eyes down at the airplane, letting the breeze blow through his whiskers and rustle his shaggy dewlap.

On above old Billy a band of seven bighorns, whose summer coats harmonized with the grayish brown of the rock, gazed down from a ledge. Over them circled a golden eagle intent upon a tiny little lamb. But none of the band looked up; it was never their habit; the enemies they feared always came from below.

Dorn cupped his hands and shouted. As his voice went crashing up against the rock, old Billy merely shook his head and blaated and dared the maker of that noise to come up and do battle with him, horn to horn. But the skittish mountain sheep exploded, and blindly obeying their agesold instinct that to seek rocky crags where enemies could not follow was to escape danger, they leaped up the precipitous cliff. In awed admiration Dorn and Aurore watched them zigzagging back and forth against that sheer rock wall, climbing, climbing, fleet and sure, till they came out upon the top and whipped over a hogback and vanished.

Only one old ram stayed behind as sentinel. Walking boldly out upon a jutting knob he stood there against the sky, looking down as though gazing at his own reflection in the mirrory lake two thousand feet below.

Aurore clapped her hands and exclaimed, "Jim, there's our name—'The Bighorn's Looking-Glass'!" and Dorn gravely entered the name in his log as eminently fitting and proper.

With the afternoon and the long northern twilight ahead of them before they dared return home, Dorn and Aurore went ashore in the canoe to the spruce-clothed northern slope of the punch-bowl. Up a game trail that led along a mountain-side torrent they started climbing, with no special purpose, no tyrannical goal, content merely to be wandering in a place of their mutual discovery where no human foot had ever trod.

In the buckbrush near lake level a family of cinnamon bears were grunting and digging for fern roots, amiably cuffing one another with somewhat resounding love pats. Through a screen of boughs Aurore pointed ahead, and looking along her arm and finger Dorn saw a bright reddish fox treading the water out of his brush. A frightened deer glanced across the torrent and out along the hillside, and the cause of its fright, a huge grizzly, came lumbering along the trail. Dorn handed his rifle to Aurore and heaved a rock at the bear, and it ambled aside with a blood-curdling snarl.

On higher they saw a lynx lying on a stone flipping trout out of a cauldron pool. The path now was lined with tufts of white wool where mountain goats had ventured down for wood plants. In the deerbrush above timber line a cow moose and her ungainly calf were pasturing, feeding in circles so that when they lay down in the center of their web a man or wolf or grizzly following their tracks would have to pass to windward and give them warning.

In a slideway of gray trap-rock just below the pinnacle they came upon a pica or "little chief hare," and sat for half an hour watching him at his summer haymaking. The little mountain hermit, solitary denizen of rock jumbles, would cut a few blades of grass and spread them on flat stones to dry in the sun, and those already cured he was carrying back into his burrow that led deep under heavy boulders where the grizzly could not pry him out as old Siam-Siam did to his little cousin the ground-squirrel and to his big brother the hoary marmot. He would sit up at times when a hawk flew over, and utter his plaintive cheep-cheep-cheep, ready to scurry into his den if the hawk hovered.

Aurore touched Dorn's arm and said: "Jim, he doesn't seem to have any mate or kith or kin in the world. His life must be awfully bleak, mere primitive existence, as ancient and lonely as these hills. A few hours of summer sunshine, a little hay-making, then his long dark winter sleep."

"Bleak—that's what it is, Aurore," Dorn answered, with an odd quality in his voice. "A few hours of sunshine—like to-day—then the long Dark again."

Aurore looked at him, a quick, hurt glance; and Dorn apologized: "I won't twist your words like that again. I won't mention the—the Dark again at all."

They climbed on over the trap-rock slideway, crossed a glacier nose and the firn above it, and came out on the pinnacle top, a flat area the size of a mere table standing bare and gaunt above the eternal snows—a lookout so lofty that Dorn remarked with a laugh: "Here must be where Satan sat when he viewed the world, past and present, Aurore. A man can see almost anything from here—except his future."

Aurore said: "I'll show you that, Jim, before we go home to-day. At least, I'll show you a picture of what your future—our future—may be."

"You'll what?" He thought that surely she was jesting, but Aurore's brown eyes were wide and serious, and there was no hint of jest in her voice as she added:

"That's what I'll do, Jim. Don't ask me now. I can't show you now. But before we reach home to-night . . ."

Dorn looked at her oddly. "Our future"—did she mean that her future was in any way bound up with his? The words puzzled him, but he refrained from questioning her.

A little later he took out his binoculars and swept the sky for leagues around for a glimpse of those two enemy planes. But he could see no threat on the horizon; the day was his and Aurore's—whatever to-morrow might bring.

There on that pinnacle Dorn thought over the whole situation between himself and his enemies; and tried to plan ahead. All along in this struggle he had been compelled to act on the defensive. He had had to guess or discover the enemy schemes and then spike them. It put him at a hard disadvantage; he felt like the legendary Sarcee who could merely escape tomahawks thrown at him without being free to return them.

Looking ahead now, he saw only one potentiality of danger—that letter and map which old Bergelot had in his possession. A man as guileless and innocent as Bergelot should not be mixed up in this locked truggle. Luke called him an old Clumsy-Foot, and the name was about right. He had left Aurore's clothes hanging almost in plain sight in his cabin; he had twice started across to visit Dorn on the island and Dorn had to wave him back. Furthermore, he was an old friend of Aurore's; her father had got him that station-master job. Soft-Shoe was just the man to dig up a fact like that and make use of it.

Against his own wish Dorn had entrusted to him that message—forced to it by the greater danger of Aurore being left in that wilderness alone and defenseless. Dorn decided: "But now old Luke is stationed up there. Now Kansas knows where she is. When I can get back to Titan Pass, I'll destroy that map and letter."

Beside him on the tiny plateau Aurore was lying full-length, sunning herself, gazing up at the blue vacuity above her. The thought came to Dorn that he ought to be thankful for having known Aurore and having had her companionship, and above all else for having gained the complete and utter trust of a girl like her. That trust, expressed in all Aurore's words and acts, rested on him like the touch of an accolade—something to be proud of, something that ennobled him.

Almost unconsciously, in the silence of their eyrie solitude, he groped for Aurore's hand, and it slipped into his; and as he sat gazing out over the mountains below, her nearness was a benediction.

Back at the plane, Dorn carefully inspected his Silver Hawk and adjusted the supercharger. There was still one marvel of his kingdom which he wanted to show Aurore—the most wonderful of them all. The air was right for it, his engine had hummed like a song all morning, he was fairly light on gas by this time.

Aurore was mightily puzzled at him for wrapping her in two warm blankets and tucking a small canvas fly all about her till she was swathed like a papoose. Dorn looked wise at her insistent questions. He merely said: "I maybe shouldn't take you through all this, but you're a little mountaineer and you'll stand it brave enough and it'll be over with before it can do you any harm."

For himself he drew on an extra pair of gloves, got out a pair of oil-glazed goggles and donned the heavy fur-collared coat which Luke had worn on the up-trip.

Taxiing twice around the Looking-Glass to heat the motor thoroughly, he took off, climbed out of the amphitheatre and began circling in long, ever-rising spirals.

The spirit thermometer of the cockpit dropped to freezing when he was level with the snowfields, and to zero when he was seven thousand feet higher, and kept dropping, dropping on below to Arctic coldness as he climbed aloft. The Bighorn's Looking-Glass speedily dwindled to a mere splash of blue, and the lordly mountain cradling it shrank to a small foothill under keel. With every rising spiral of the Silver Hawk the horizon unfolded a more distant vision, disclosing new faraway ranges—range upon range standing above the aerial haze and stretching out of sight in the miniature of immense distance. But he went on up, up, up, sweeping the heavens in great circles, as though he meant to climb to the roof of the world.

Far westward toward the Pacific, Aurore and he could see a dozen black thunderstorms, their lightning flashes jabbing like white snakes at the mountains. Eastward over the foothill country hung the pearl-gray haze of forest fires. North and south beyond the limit of vision stretched the mighty Rockies, the backbone of the North American continent.

The sky gradually became a deeper, darker blue. The sun's halo disappeared, and the sun itself was merely a bright disc of dazzling copperish colour. In that lifeless region of the upper air its rays had no warmth or cheerfulness. An invisible ice—incredibly thin flakes riding level on the wind—stung him like tiny daggers.

At twenty thousand feet Dorn turned to Aurore. She was leaning forward close behind her windshield; her breath had formed rime frost on the mask he had fashioned for her. But she freed her mouth for an instant and smiled back at him, knowing now what his adventure was; and her pursed lips answered his unspoken question:

"Yes, Jim! Yes! On up, up . . ."

Each thousand feet above twenty came slower, harder. Always Dorn kept an eye on that dot of blue below him, where he could glide down to a dead-stick landing in case the engine failed. And he kept strict watch over his body, his senses. His breathing was laboured, his limbs cramped and chilled to the bone; he had to fight a drowsiness stealing over him. But he had been aloft enough to know the danger signals; he meant to drop back down at the first imperative warning; and his limit was not yet come.

When he looked around now he saw that Aurore's eyelids were heavy. She too was fighting the drowsiness. He had never in the world expected her to stick it out this long; he had expected her to go to sleep in the warm place he had fixed for her; but she was still awake, still alert, and he climbed on aloft.

In that thin air the Silver Hawk was now standing slightly on its tail for greater lifting power against the wings, and the tilt rapidly increased. At twenty-three thousand feet Dorn struck a steady wind blowing out of the northwest; a wind so strong that the Silver Hawk could rise against it hovering nearly still, with ground-speed almost nothing. With no more spiralling he held the plane head-on into the screaming gale and felt it bracing the wings, lifting the Silver Hawk on higher and higher till his slow progress dwindled to nothing and he came out upon his ceiling, twenty-six thousand feet aloft; and hovered there for half a minute while he gestured for Aurore to look at the ten million acres of wilderness spread below.

Then with the danger signals ringing in his ears, Dorn turned the plane downward, back toward mother earth.

When he came down from his ceiling Dorn headed for the Lost River Dutchman's post to take on gas and oil, as he and Aurore had planned while in the Bighorn's Looking-Glass. For the first forty miles to the vedette their flight lay over unglaciated spear-head mountains with only deep canyons of perpetual twilight in between. But the ranges then began to take on softer, rounder outlines; the valleys widened. They flew over muskeg swamps teeming with water-fowl rookeries, over tamarack lowlands where moose and caribou yarded in winter, over beaver meadows where trapping must have been a paradise.

Nearing their goal they came upon a sign of human life—an abandoned Indian camp where teepee leather flapped idly on rotting poles. A little later they winged over a lake where a band of nomad "Smokies" were passing the summer at their fish weirs. On a spruce-buried river Dorn glimpsed a canoe with two scarlet dots in prow and stern, and focussing the glasses, saw it was a Police patrol on some wilderness business—possibly to those same nomad Indians. Recognizing the insignia on his plane wings, they waved their paddles, and he leaned out to answer.

The silvery ribbon of a sizable stream swam in sight far ahead. Dorn spotted the river-widening where the Dutchman's vedette was located, and veered toward it. To make sure neither of the enemy planes was there, he circled once before alighting.

The lonely vedette stood in a clearing on the river bank. It consisted of a large squat building, a fur storage shed of heavy rocks and logs, a fur press, pole frames for stretching big peltry and drying fish and meat, a canoe landing, and an acre of quick-maturing vegetables. It was rumour that the indefatigable Dutchman, bringing in his seed potatoes from Fort Vermilion one winter, had kept them from freezing by sleeping with them next to his body.

No one knew where the Lost River Dutchman and his wife had come from. Their names and identities were lost in the past of uprooted wanderers. They had simply appeared out of nowhere—city-bred cheechakos in a raw, savage wilderness; and located their vedette on the lonely river.

While Dorn was helping Aurore out of the blankets and canvas, she said to him: "Jim, my father told me a story of these folk here. Dad lent them money and befriended them when they first came, and I believe he knew the truth about them. This is what he told me; he asked me never to repeat it, but I believe Dad would want you to know.

"This man here was an officer in the Prussian army, Jim—a young officer with the most brilliant kind of prospects. This woman then was the wife of a general in the—I think Dad said the French army. They met at a diplomatic affair, they liked each other, and they ran away together. They made aliens and exiles of themselves, Jim. Europe wasn't big enough to hold them. They had to forget their names and their identities. They came to the States; they were traced and would have been deported; but they escaped into Canada and found safety—here."

Aurore's account sounded a little incredible to Dorn; but he had often thought there had to be some strange story in the lives of these two strange people; and he did not reject Aurore's explanation.

When he took Aurore ashore the Dutchman was in the storage shed making castorum—a mixture of the female beaver scent beaten up with aspen buds; but he dropped his work and trundled down to the landing, and his wife came out of the log dwelling to greet their visitors.

It was with sharpened eyes that Dorn observed the pair now. There was nothing about the Dutchman—fat from spruce-beer and heavy meat-eating—to suggest a former officer in the Imperial Army, but his wife was startling proof of every word Aurore had said. Though she was now a woman of forty, Dorn thought she must have been beautiful in her halcyon days. Her black hair was still long and silken, there was a nameless grace in her carriage and manners, her French was not of the Strong-Woods nor the eastern habitants of Canada, but unmistakably Parisian.

In that lonely alien wilderness, with her husband and herself the butt of coarse jokes, she had sunk to a pitiful level. She had no pride left, no desire to keep herself pretty even in the eyes of her husband. Her clothes were greasy, her features expressionless, her body as shapeless as a bag of pemmican tied in the middle.

"Vell, vell, Chim!" the Dutchman boomed, after he had shaken hands twice and kicked a snarling dog. "Py golly I see you got marriet vunce!"

"Oh, no, we're—Aurore's my sister—Aurore Dorn. She just wanted to come along to-day and see what my work was like."

"Ya! I believe dass, Chim! You bet. Didn't I saw you handle her into de canoe unt den handle her onto de landink? Ya! Her unt you—Geschwestern? Der Teufel! Geschwestern dey don't act like dot! Contgradulachuns, Chim! Come up to de house. Ve vill do de honours."

There was something pathetic in the way the Dutchman and his wife craved talk with Dorn and Aurore that afternoon. Something profoundly pitiful in the way his wife, hopeless and broken in spirit, kept looking wistfully at Aurore, envying a girlhood such as her own had been.

Dorn thought: "She's regretted a thousand times what she did—if only for his sake, that she ruined his career. And if he loves her at all or ever did, he must hate himself for dragging her down to this."

The thought came to him, shocking and abhorrent, that here was a forebodement of himself and Aurore, twenty years hence, if they too yielded to passion. Aurore had said to him: "Only by degrading yourself and me, Jim, can it ever be." And then Dorn realized why Aurore had repeated to him the story which her father had told her; and why, on the eyrie pinnacle of the mountain-top, she had said, "I'll show you what your future—our future—may be." She had guessed, she had somehow become aware of the temptation he fought, to take her into his plane and be down across the Border with her in twelve hours. She had repeated that story in order that he could see a living picture of what might come to pass for himself and for her in the years ahead. She had raised a mirror of the Future to his eyes; and Dorn shrank back, appalled, from what he saw.

CHAPTER XXV—A HOME NEVER TO BE BUILT.

It was near midnight when Dorn and Aurore came back to the Lake of the Dawn. As they walked up the path together under the towering pines, Aurore said to him:

"Kansas told me, Jim, how you and he have worked out plans to start an air line between Seattle and Alaska. He wouldn't tell me the cost of it. But won't you?"

Her question surprised and jarred Dorn. He wondered why Aurore wanted to know about that hopeless project, and how she could mention so unimportant a thing now when a few more minutes together were all they had. He said, "It would cost more than's in sight for Kansas and me in ten years," and thought to end the subject.

"We'd need three big, safe, cabined flying-boats. They'd cost forty thousand apiece. Then advertising, hydrodromes, franchise. About a hundred and sixty thousand—to start on."

"Jim, my father left most of his estate to me. I'm of age now, it's mine. There must be over half a million. All to-day I've been thinking . . . God knows you'd make better use of money than ever I could. You wouldn't be offended, Jim, you wouldn't think I was trying to repay kindness with dollars if I . . . I want to stake you! It's the only gift in my power to make. Won't you let me, dear?"

Dorn was overwhelmed by an offer so downright and unexpected. It confused and bewildered him, and this was the first time Aurore had allowed herself to use a word of passion toward him. Then he thought: "I can't accept her money. She'd be a partner in everything; I could never plan or work but I'd be remembering her."

Aurore did not wait for his refusal, but went on, a little breathlessly: "I'm going to make you accept it, Jim! I'm going to put it on deposit for you. You think now you'd never use it, but—but after a time you'll feel differently, and then it'll be waiting for you. Don't you see how I'd watch and read of your success, Jim, and how glad I'd be of it?"

Dorn could not wound Aurore by refusing directly. He tried not to be bitter: "There's a part of that plan, Aurore, which Kansas didn't tell you about; I never told him, but I'll tell you now. Over there on the coast, where I could manage this air line and yet wouldn't be living in a city, I've got a home. It's on a mountain slope, with the sea in front of it and the mountains—nearly as mossy and wild as these ranges here—stretching back of it. It's the kind of a home I've always been hungry for. You, and Kansas too, you can't possibly understand what the word means; only a person like myself who's never had one, can know. With me that home and the air line and—other things—they all hang together; one without the others would be intolerable. I've had that home for more than a year now, but the girl living there with me, my wife——"

He was checked by Aurore's sharp, anguished cry. They had come to a pool of moonlight on the path and Aurore stopped suddenly and confronted him, and she was trembling as though his words "girl" and "wife" had struck her a terrible blow. Dorn said quickly: "But, Aurore, wait; I'll finish this absurdity of mine; the girl living there, my wife—she had never been more than a shadow to me—only the vaguest kind of an ideal of what I thought a girl should be. Then three weeks ago . . . it's just three weeks, almost this same hour, isn't it, Aurore, that you came over to my island? . . . I was studying one night and looked up, and she stood there under the torch of my tent——"

Aurore understood him then, and she cried: "Your home isn't built yet, Jim! That's what you mean! It's only—what you hoped for."

"Then you understand, Aurore, why I can't accept your offer. You'd be paying for the air line, for the home—and you would not be there. Could I stand that?"

Aurore did not urge him. She was thinking: "Next year at this time I'll write to him and tell him where the money is deposited." And with that resolution made, she was face to face with her greater duty to Dorn, which all that day she had desperately staved off.

They were still standing in the pool of moonlight. Out on the bosom of the lake they heard the sociable gabble of ducks feeding in deep water, and the sleepy koke-koke of a pair of wild swans. In the night silence arose the voice of the mountains—the chastened murmur of overfalls, the swelling whisper of avalanches, the dreamy rustle of pine boughs overhead, all blended into one endless slumber song.

"You asked him to?"

Physicians Favor Use of Cascara

Doctors who warn against the use of violent, habit-forming purgatives will tell you that cascara is one of the gentlest and most beneficial laxatives known to science. Cascarets are nothing but pure cascara, sweetened with cane sugar and flavored with licorice. You can take them any time that Nature needs a little help with the process of elimination—and never experience any discomfort, nausea or unpleasant after effects.

You can easily tell when you are suffering from faulty elimination. You feel listless, out of sorts, perhaps your tongue is coated or you have a bilious, headachy feeling. Cascarets will clear up this sluggish feeling every time and soon have your system functioning as it should. You needn't hesitate to give them to children or old folks either.

Cascarets always act, and they always act the same way; gentle but thorough. They don't stir up the stomach or upset the system, but they cleanse the entire thirty feet of bowels in one comfortable, thorough action that leaves the system sweet and clean. You'll wake up feeling like a new person; tongue uncoated, breath sweetened, eyes bright, appetite on edge, life worth living again!

Take a delicious, candy Cascaret the next time you have that sluggish feeling—or give them to the children when they are out of sorts. Full medical endorsement proves the principle of Cascarets is right.

Children will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always one sure way to comfort a restless, fretful child. Castoria! Harmless as the recipe on the wrapper; mild and bland as it tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than some powerful medicine that is meant for the stronger systems of adults.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant—as often as there is any need. In cases of colic, diarrhea, or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. But it has everyday uses all mothers should understand. A coated tongue calls for a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed to set everything to rights. Genuine Castoria has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper. Doctors prescribe it.

The DUDLEY TOPCOAT

WE'VE slashed, cut, and whittled! Large and small—every conceivable obstacle between us and our customers' savings—and as a result we guarantee a savings of at least $10 on every suit.

We've done away with seasonal work—each machine, every man, produces one hundred per cent day after day throughout the entire year. Our overhead is 6%—the Government rates 30% as just, right and reasonable. Owning our 5 big sunlit factories has saved us thousands upon thousands. We refuse to take 3 great profits and have cut 6 distribution costs to one. These are economies we pass on to you. And now so many men have bought so many Foreman & Clark garments at such tremendous savings that we're able to sacrifice profit for quantity—to make no more than 55c on any suit we sell.*

Drawn from the fashion centers of the world—our styles come in—are made up—and shipped out! Day after day new models in varied patterns and colors go to our Coast to Coast stores—to be sold months ahead of any other clothier's. These are styles that are new and different—designed to meet the demands of the high standards of Foreman & Clark customers.

36 separate hand tailoring operations go into every Foreman & Clark suit. It's the kind of expert craftsmanship that imparts their added touch of style and luxury. The fabrics, woven according to our own exacting requirements, are produced by English and American mills famous for their long wearing, splendid draping all wools. Before ever a tailor's shears touches these fabrics we test them for strength, color fastness and all wool content with tests the exact duplicates of those used by the U. S. Bureau of Standards.
